The Gains Tax
Lady Astor's Party
New Ideas, New Wealth
Women Are Better

By Arthur Brisbane

THE MOST IMPORTANT PARAGRAPH in President Hoover's extremely important message deals with the "capital-gains tax." This tax, which the President condemns, causes many of our troubles. Hampering freedom of purchase and sale, it caused, largely, the gambling mania of a year ago by withdrawing stocks from the market, and, through scarcity, constantly increasing prices.

Under the capital-gains tax, if you buy and sell at a profit, you must pay a tax on that profit.

On the other hand, if you buy and sell at a loss, you can deduct your loss from income tax.

While prices were going up, men would not sell, and the government made no profit in the way of a capital-gains tax.

But after the slump, with prices going down, thousands sold, to get the benefit of income tax reduction, and this shows in Uncle Sam's diminished receipts.

Our neighbors in Canada have no such unwise tax, discouraging free buying and selling, and many Americans, ingeniously advised, when they want to sell at a profit, do their selling across the border, in Canada. At a loss, they sell here.

The capital-gains tax is an unwise tax, hampering business, encouraging accumulation, based on fear of taxation on profits.

Lady Astor gives a party and invites only women, 36 of them, who, says she, are the 36 most important women in England.

And they are all workers in some field, scientists, doctors, government workers. Not one would be called by our American reporters "a society woman" or anything approaching it.

It would be interesting to print the pictures of those 36 women selected by Lady Astor and contrast with their faces the 36 most important women, if they could be identified, in the New York city's "four hundred," selected by Ward McAllister long ago.

Which set of 36 faces do you think would show the most intelligence? Morrill Goddard should publish this comparison in his scientific weekly.

Dr. Miller Reese Hutchison has a new invention, and Hawks, our greatest air pilot at the moment, is experimenting with it. The importance of this invention, if Dr. Hutchison's hopes are realized, cannot be exaggerated.

It will take from the fumes of gasoline the deadly quality that poisons the air in great cities, causing occasional deaths in closed garages.

Even more important, is the fact that this new gasoline is expected to increase the cruising range of an airplane by almost 100 per cent.

What men can imagine, they can do, and what they require, their brains can produce.

Any workman fighting against improved methods, in machinery or anything else, fights against himself in the long run.

Similarly any individual that fights against a new idea also fights against himself.

In Britain's cotton industry, as in certain lines of work here, workers refuse to do as much, or even half as much, as they might do if they chose. They call this "helping the other man to get a job."

Mill owners in England offered increased pay to their workers, almost doubling wages, if the men would attend to eight looms instead of the usual four, which they could do quite well.

The men say "no." They want to do half as much as they can, so as to give twice as many men work.

That idea will keep them poor, and force in machines that will do more than men ever dreamed of doing.

To fight progress is folly.

Give women a chance, and they work. In the air they are doing more than men in proportion to opportunity.

Mrs. Keith-Miller, in spite of bad weather, undertakes a dangerous flight, has a narrow escape and tells about it quite cheerfully.

Miss Ruth Nichols of Rye, New York, flies from the Atlantic to the Pacific in 16 hours 59½ minutes, taking almost 9 hours from the women's record.

Does she rest and talk about herself? No! She will start again and see how fast she can can cross the continent in the other direction.

In women courage and a majority of the other good qualities are more highly developed than in men.

Conceit which is useful, because it encourages us, keeps men from knowing it.

To say that Mr. Davis, former

Paris, Dec. 3—The mental extravaganzas of the Soviet do not even merit a shrug of the shoulders.

Neither the denial that I gave to the ridiculous assertions of the Bolshevist prosecutor, nor the similar course followed in Moscow by M. Jean Herbette, our ambassador to the Soviets, at the instance of M. Briand, has served to put M. Stalin (Soviet dictator) on guard against the mad diversion that he has sought out as a result of the woeful miscarriage of the five-year plan.

They have begun, with a lot of fuss before a carefully rehearsed crowd, a prosecution of those Russian groups that they describe under the name of "the Industrial Party," and they shamelessly accuse these men of having contrived, in complicity with France and England, a plot against Soviet Russia.

Whether Prof. Ramzin and other members of the Industrial Party conspired against the government I do not know, nor do I care.

Necessarily, there must be some very credulous people in Moscow who believe, or who have believed, these fairy tales.

BARE PLOT SOON

To further what object were these pretty stories invented?

Was it to try to justify making rigorous measures even more violent?

Was it to seek to present Soviet Russia to the world's eyes as an innocent victim of French and English persecution?

I do not know. It will not be long before we become better ac

MRS. BARRON IS FIRST 'MASTER'

For the first time in the history of this Commonwealth a woman today was appointed as master to hear evidence in a civil suit and report to the Superior Court.

She is Mrs. Jeannie Loitman Barron, a member of the Massachusetts bar. The suit was brought by Mrs. Isabella Barron against her husband, Arthur G. Barron, for increased alimony for support of her children.

Mrs. Jennie Barron was sitting behind the bar enclosure when Clerk James McDermott called the name. She smiled in surprise, whereupon Judge Louis S. Cox appointed her to hear the evidence in the case, remarking it was a case of "Barron against Barron."

He said he sponsored the measure in the hope Congress would appropriate the fund as an emergency measure of relief.

HOOVER SEEKS $4,667,000,000 FOR BUDGET

Deficit of $180,076,000 Forecast; Urges Halt in Continued Tax Reduction

Washington, Dec. 3—President Hoover sent a $4,667,000,000 budget to Congress today, with an injunction to expand unemployment and drouth relief despite the impending deficit, but to shun continued tax reduction.

He forecast a deficit for this fiscal year, ending June 30, of $180,076,000. This must be increased, he pointed out, to expand the relief measures. But the deficit, coming after a succession of thumping surpluses and retirement of the public debt $3,500,000,000 ahead of schedule, is not a matter of "great concern," Mr. Hoover said.

He proposed it be met in part by reducing the balance in the Treasury's general fund at the year-end, in remainder by temporary borrowing. He was confident of the return of healthy surpluses, out of which the temporary borrowings may be repaid.

REVENUE SHRINKING

Meanwhile a $30,600,000 surplus appears to be in sight for the next fiscal year, Mr. Hoover found. This would be much more than wiped out by continuance of the $160,000,000 tax reduction through 1931. With revenues shrinking and emergency expenditures mounting, the tax reduction accordingly should be waived in the interest of a balanced budget and a "sound basis" for federal finances.

Shrinking revenues, coupled with an increase of over $225,000,000 in this fiscal year's expenditures due to unemployment relief and to more liberal aid to veterans, would leave the government's pocketbook

Senate Votes Probe of Cotton Price Drop

"Faithful" Salesgirl Left $500,000 Boston Shop

As a reward "for faithful service," Miss Elizabeth H. Riley of Medford was today bequeathed $25,000 outright, the beautiful home of her late employer in Brookline and the latter's $500,000 millinery business in the Back Bay.

These unusual gifts to a woman employe were revealed in the will of Mrs. Mary A. Dolan of 240 South st., Brookline, filed in Norfolk Probate Court.

Mrs. Dolan, who amassed a fortune estimated at about a half-million in her millinery business, known as "Driscolls," 715 Boylston st., made many bequests to religious and charitable organizations as well as to all her relatives and employes.

$30,000 TO EX-EMPLOYE

To Miss Josephine B. Mahoney, who worked for her as a milliner for years, but who is no longer employed at the Back Bay shop, Mrs. Dolan left $30,000 outright.

She gave $20,000 to her niece, Miss Mary J. Donnelly.

The executors are directed to conduct the business for a year before turning it over to Miss Riley for her own direction.

BEGAN AS APPRENTICE

Mrs. Dolan started as an apprentice girl and at her death had one of the most fashionable clienteles in Boston.

The Brookline home, at which she recently died, is known as "The Rocks." This estate with all of its furnishings and her personal property go to Miss Riley.

After bequests to relatives ranging from $500 to $5000 and totaling $95,000, Mrs. Dolan's will gives $1000 each to six other employes at her millinery shop, Lillian B. Potrast, Annie Hickey, Margaret R. Grourke, Mrs. Thomas Gallagher, Emily Mahoney and M. J. Wilson.

RICH PUBLISHER DEAD IN FIRE

New York, Dec. 3 (AP)—Courtland H. Young, 54, wealthy magazine publisher, was found dead today in his apartment in West 55th st. apparently asphyxiated by smoke from a fire that swept the living room. A cigarette was believed to have caused the fire.

The house superintendent told police he entered Young's apartment during the fire and saw the publisher walking nervously about and called repeatedly, telling him there was only smoke between him and safety, but Young ignored him. The smoke grew so dense that the superintendent had to leave, he said.

Mr. Young, a native of New Orleans, founded "Young's Magazine" in 1899 and had published it ever since. "Breezy Stories," "Yellow Book" and "Droll Stories" were others in his list of publications.

For five years Young's marital difficulties were in the courts intermittently until December, 1928, when he was granted a divorce in New Jersey from Dorothea R. Campbell, who was then 26.

In 1923 she had sued for separation, charging that he went on long debauches and beat her. In 1924 he was arrested for disorderly conduct when his wife accused him of trying to take their three-year-old daughter away from her, but the charge was dismissed.

Oath Administered to Senator Morrow

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—Dwight W. Morrow was administered the oath today as Senator from New Jersey.

WINSLOW AGAIN ON RAIL BOARD

Washington, Dec. 3 (INS)—President Hoover today sent his first batch of nominations for federal judgeships, postmasters, district attorneys and marshals to this session of the Senate today for confirmation. They included the name of William N. Doak, Roanoke, Va., to be Secretary of Labor.

The President also sent a long list of nominations which he made during the recess of Congress and already have been announced. They included those of Reuben Clark as ambassador to Mexico, Hoffman Phillips as minister to Norway, Nicholas Roosevelt as minister to Hungary, J. B. Wright as minister to Uruguay, and Charles D. Mitchell as minister to Liberia.

Eugene Myer's nomination as governor of the federal reserve board was sent up. Samuel W. Winslow of Massachusetts received reappointment to the railway board of mediation.

Miss Earhart, Fiance on Secret Flight

Newark Airport, N. J., Dec. 3 (AP)—Amelia Earhart, George Palmer Putnam and a woman whose name was not divulged departed by airplane today for an unrevealed destination. Miss Earhart recently denied reports of her marriage to Putnam, although they obtained a license to wed in Connecticut.

At the airport it was said that the party alighted from a bus, got into the plane quickly and departed.

BOSTON TIP WARNED HIM OF TRAP IN NEW YORK

District Attorney Wants to Know His Reason for Coming Out of Hiding

A "leak" from Boston police headquarters allowed Oliver B. Garrett to escape from the hands of police last September.

That startling disclosure, made today for the first time, was the day's highlight of the "strange Garrett case," which finds the former police raider and alleged extortionist back in Charles St. Jail of his own volition awaiting trial. Others were:

1—Investigation by Dist. Atty. Foley of mysterious circumstances attending Garrett's surrender.

2—Test of the defaulter's sanity by two state psychiatrists.

3—Garrett visited in jail by his wife and Mrs. Lillian V. Hatch, co-defendants at liberty on bail, and two unidentified young women.

4—Speeding of plans for the Garrett trial on Dec. 15 with the probability that Judge David F. Dillon will be recalled from Springfield to preside.

STORY OF LEAK

The story of the police headquarters "leak" which allowed Garrett to slip from the hands of Boston and New York inspectors in New York in September created a sensation in police circles today.

One jump ahead of of Sergt. Inspector George Augusta and Inspector William LeBlanc, and unaware that they were at his heels, Garrett was suddenly "tipped" from Boston headquarters and vanished when the trap for his capture at Coney Island was baited.

The presence of the Boston inspectors on Garrett's trail in New York was supposedly known by only a few police officials.

On first hand information that Garrett was living in an apartment in the Bronx, Inspectors Augusta and LeBlanc went to New York on Sept. 14.

The apartment was located the first day and the same day the Boston inspectors decided that none of the other occupants of the house could be trusted to co-operate with them and so went to Deputy Commissioner James Sinnott of the New York police.

The deputy commissioner turned them over to Chief Inspector John Sullivan who assigned Detective Charles Kane to aid them. Kane is

HOW 'LEAK' FROM BOSTON ENABLED GARRETT TO ESCAPE POLICE

Foley Probes Mysterious Circumstances Under Which He Surrendered

APARTMENT LOCATED

They located the apartment, in a house on Colgate ave., a section being newly developed and offering every advantage as a hideaway.

Garrett was supposedly living in an apartment on the second floor front with another man. The detectives had registered at an uptown hotel to avoid being recognized and as a further precaution checked out and moved to another second-rate hotel.

On Sept. 16, Kane took the Boston inspectors to Inspector Henry Duane of the Bronx headquarters who assigned Detectives William Wallace, Martin Fitzpatrick, William Sterrer and Johnny Cortes to work with them. Cortes is recognized as one of the smartest detectives in the country.

On the fourth day of the inquiry it became obvious that the inspectors could not "plant" the house from the outside without arousing suspicion so they hired the apartment over that under surveillance.

They went into this apartment on Thursday night at 8 o'clock, having bought the necessary furniture to enable them to live there and maintain a 24-hour-a-day vigil.

GOT CALL FROM BOSTON

They had been in the apartment only an hour and 20 minutes when the man in the apartment below received a telephone call from Boston, from a man under indictment in white slave cases. The Boston man talked with the occupant of the apartment under suspicion regarding vice operations in Boston.

They talked in English for seven or eight minutes, then in a foreign language. As a result of this conversation and a telephone message between Inspector LeBlanc and the Boston man who had furnished the original tip, the detectives learned that Garrett was in Brooklyn.

Still maintaining the plant in the Bronx apartment house, the investigators shifted the scene of their activities to Brooklyn, with Inspector Joel Thompson. There they learned that Garrett was a frequent visitor in Brooklyn and Coney Island.

SEARCH AT CONEY ISLAND.

With four detectives from the 80th precinct Coney Island detective headquarters, one of the Boston inspectors began an intensive search for Garrett at the beach resort.

They learned that Garrett was living in a house at Coney Island and that he was a daily visitor at "The Paddock," a gambling resort there, where each afternoon he was laying bets—large bets at that—on horse races and various sporting events.

He had been a short time before in the company of a ticket seller associated with a promoter of open-air fights at Coney Island. A speakeasy bartender identified him as a steady customer and told the police he had beaten the bookmakers with an indelible pencil trick.

FOUND CONEY ISLAND HOUSE

The bartender was not told the man was Garrett. The detectives learned the location of the Coney Island house where Garrett was living. They learned that he planned to attend the open air fight on the Friday night of the second week of the investigation.

They baited the trap and planned to arrest him at the fights. He never showed up at the fights. When they finally entered the Coney Island house it was to learn that the bird had flown several days before on a tip-off from Boston that they were close on his heels.

A telephone message in a foreign tongue to the Bronx apartment under surveillance is believed to have been the medium and the white slaver the agent. By elimination of all other trails, the source of the leak has been traced back to Boston and to police circles.

It was definitely determined that Garrett had been in constant touch with the occupant of the Bronx apartment for details of Boston activities.

FOLEY STARTS PROBE.

Garrett had slipped the net—somebody had opened a hole for him—and after three weeks in New York Inspectors Augusta and LeBlanc returned to Boston disgusted.

Coincident with this disclosure, Dist. Atty. Foley started his investigation of Garrett's surrender.

The district attorney seeks to learn who were Garrett's accomplices, where he was hidden and the real reason why he gave himself up when officials had no clue to his whereabouts.

QUIZZES DETECTIVES

Starting his inquiry into Garrett's story that he spent the last five weeks hidden in the Franklin cottage occupied by his wife and Mrs. Lillian V. Hatch, co-defendants in the case, District Attorney Foley questioned Pinkerton detectives assigned to guard that cottage at a cost of more than $12,000 to the State.

The Pinkerton operatives convinced him that Garrett was never hidden in the Franklin house, he said. William Jones, head of the Pinkerton criminal bureau, told the district attorney it was not only impossible for Garrett to have been in the cottage while it was under surveillance, but that it would have been impossible for him or anybody else to have slept under the eaves, his claimed "hide-out."

FACES DOCTORS IN CELL.

A story that Garrett came directly from New York to Boston, Sunday night, before his surrender was under investigation.

The sanity test, of which Garrett has lived in dread for months, was Abraham Myerson.

The test was given in Garrett's cell. The doctors will decide whether another visit to Garrett will be necessary. They expect to have determined by Friday whether Garrett is sane or insane.

Carrying another suit for "Ollie" so that, even in jail, he would not be obliged to wear the same suit every day, Mrs. Garrett called again this afternoon at Charles st. Mrs. Hatch was with her, paying her first visit to the former policeman whom she has not seen since his default. She carried a large paper bundle. There were two young women with them and they spent an hour with the prisoner before the psychiatrists arrived to give Garrett his sanity test.

READY FOR TRIAL DEC. 16

Dist. Atty. Foley said he would be prepared to place Garrett, his wife and Mrs. Hatch on trial Dec. 16. Nearly all of his 62 witnesses have been checked and found prepared to take the stand.

His most important witness, John F. Sullivan, who claims to have been "bled" by the former raider for protection of liquor traffic at the Hotel Ritz, was interviewed by Asst. Dist. Atty. Doyle and declared himself ready and anxious to take the stand and repeat the story he told at the attorney-general's investigation.

Sullivan, under guard day and night at his Newbury st. home, is nervous and not in the best of health it is understood.

The district attorney said he would go before Chief Justice Walter Perley Hall tomorrow to ask to have the case assigned for trial. He expects the trial will be over before Christmas.

While Judge Dillon, originally assigned to the case, is sitting in Springfield, Foley pointed out it would be a simple matter to have him reassigned and shifted to Boston. If Judge Dillon is not reassigned either Judge Burns or Judge Williams will probably be named to preside.

Again today District Attorney Foley answered Superintendent Crowley's criticism of the failure to take Garrett to police headquarters after his surrender. Foley pointed out that the default warrants call for the surrender of his person either to court or to jail and not to the police.

The government's case will be handled by Doyle and Asst. Dist. Atty. Daniel Gillen, Foley said. He has not yet been in conference with Herbert F. Callahan, Garrett's lawyer, regarding the trial date, but Callahan is said to be ready to go on.

Garrett at present is apparently satisfied with the rather comfortless surroundings of his cell at the jail. At least he prefers to stay there rather than fight for bail. Callahan, said no attempt would be made to gain his client's freedom on bail. He flatly denied reports he would open a fight in court today to secure bail.

Exclusive of the November bills, which have not been received, the search for Garrett cost the county $22,333.50. The itemized expense bills on file in the Superior Court celrk's office are as follows:

Inspector Joseph Cavagnaro	$235.08
Special Officer Martin Conroy	823.62
Special Officer Joseph McBrine	243.41
Lybrand, Ross Bros. and Montgomery, accountants	346.84

Garrett still remains aloof to newspapermen. He denied admittance to them at the jail yesterday, although he knew that some seeking to see him were numbered among his best friends in his heyday. He seemed to be contented to keep to himself.

He seems to be resigned to staying in custody and is said to be pleased with the treatment he is receiving at the jail. Those close to him say he is certain he will be found not guilty when his case comes to trial and that his biggest worry now is the mental examination.

It is also said with reasonable certainty that Garrett will never name the "higher-ups" in the case, as he once threatened to do. Although irritated at the failure of his friends to come to see him, it is said he will not involve any of them if they are culpable.

So it may be considered assured that Garrett will go to trial along with his wife and Mrs. Hatch, indicted with him on the extortion and conspiracy charges, without naming any others. It is said that he is not expecting any breaks from the prosecution and that he merely asks a fair trial.

MAYOR QUOTED FOR 'BEER AND PROSPERITY'

Col. Berger, Director of 1931 Boston Exposition, Addresses the Showmen in Chicago

Chicago, Dec. 3—The return of prosperity hinges upon the return of light wines and beers in the United States and if the Republicans don't bring them back the Democrats will.

This was the prediction of Mayor James M. Curley of Boston, revealed last night by Col. John S. Berger, director of the New England States Century of Progress Exposition to be held in Boston next June 16 to July 15.

Col. Berger, vice-president of the Showmen's League of America, came here from Boston to attend the annual convention of that organization. He made Mayor Curley's sentiments known as a discussion in an executive committee meeting today.

Showmen from all over the country, men who annually direct the successful spending of millions in connection with fairs, expositions and similar projects, applauded vigorously when Col Berger said:

"What this country needs is a lot more mayors like Curley!"

Col. Berger pointed out that Mayor Curley, creator of the "Buy Now" movement which has swept the country, has the confidence of many influential eastern men and women. Mrs. Calvin Coolidge heads the Women's Committee for the 1931 World's Fair.

Said the Mayor's representative:

"Mayor Curley is coming out strongly for light wines and beers. It is his belief that they can't be restored too soon. He told me the other day he believes the country's salvation depends upon a modification of the law to allow these mild beverages.

"He points out that the return of light wines and beer would at once provide work for many persons. In addition, many properties now vacant would be occupied. The farmers, in behalf of whom the last several administrations have been fruitlessly struggling, would be immeasurably benefited."

$4,667,000,000 Budget Asked by Hoover

But this figure has been pulled down, the President pointed out, by using for running expenses the $185,000,000 of interest payments on foreign debts, and by deferring until the next fiscal year the provision of a $100,000,000 revolving loan fund for the federal farm board.

These steps and certain economies cut the expected deficit to $180,000,000. The message continued:

"I do not look with favor on any attempts to meet this deficit by reduction of the statutory redemption of the public debt, which now amounts to about $440,000,000 per annum.

"When we recollect that our budget has yielded large surpluses for the last 11 years, which have enabled us to retire the public debt, in addition to retirements required by law, to the extent of nearly $3,500,000,000, we can confidently look forward to the restoration of such surpluses with the general recovery of the economic situation.

MORE APPROPRIATIONS

"It will probably be necessary for congress to appropriate additional money for expenditure within the present fiscal year in order to increase employment and to provide for the drouth situation.

"While this will operate to increase the amount of the deficit as above estimated, I believe such increase can be accommodated by the methods indicated. On the other hand, no appropriation should be made for such purposes which look beyond such action as will ameliorate the immediate situation during the next six months.

"I regret the present outlook for heavy decrease in probable income and the necessity to increase public works and aid to employment does not warrant the continuation of the reduction at the present time. The difference in revenue between the tax rates upon incomes authorized for the calendar year 1929 by the joint resolution approved Dec. 16, 1929, and the rates specified in the Revenue Act of 1928 is approximately $160,000,000.

BALANCED BUDGET

"If our expected revenues for 1932 were reduced by this amount a deficit for 1932 as well as 1931 would now appear to be inevitable. I am confident the sentiment of the people is in favor of a balanced budget.

"I am satisfied that in the absence of further legislation imposing any considerable burden upon our 1932 finances we can close that year with a balanced budget.

"When we stop to consider that we are progressively amortizing our public debt, and that a balanced budget is being presented for 1932, even after drastic writing down of expected revenue, I believe it will be agreed that our Government finances are in a sound condition."

The President's budget total included $735,000,000 for the postal service which is payable out of postal revenues. Deducting this, the total of estimated expenditures for the fiscal year 1932, payable from the treasury, was $3,932,842,000, or $221,000,000 more than this year.

Dry law enforcement will cost the country $3,000,000 more next year if the estimates are approved as submitted. Mr. Hoover stepped up the prohibition bureau's proposed appropriation from $9,050,000 to $11,530,000 without comment.

No appropriation was asked for the new enforcement commission which is drawing $250,000 this year. Although the message withheld comment of this, the withholding of an estimate was taken to make it virtually certain that the commission will wind up its work by June 30.

A $35,000,000 estimate was submitted for a Shipping Board construction loan fund to finance shipbuilding by private interests.

IGNORANT OF PROJECT

I should, in any case, repeat that neither M. Briand nor I, nor the French general staff, knew anything either in 1928—nor before nor since—of the projects, true or false, of the industrial party.

I should love to have someone tell me in what mysterious room the Russian conspirators talked with my twin, and whom he described himself as being when he gave them a hearing.

I should love, above all, to have someone show me the supposed plans of the French general staff, and point out to me where and how and under what conditions the contemplated attack on Soviet Russia was to have been made.

But enough of this humor! Let us quit the world of the insane and return to the world in which we live.

Poincare Named in Soviet Plot Trial

Moscow, Dec. 3 (AP)—The special tribunal in the House of Columns today at noon closed its doors to the curious and proceeded to question eight Soviet engineers on trial charged with plotting overthrow of the Moscow government.

Particularly prominent in the private questioning, it was known, was the name of Raymond Poincare, former president of France, and of France itself. Also mentioned were "K" "A" and "R," alleged French agents at Moscow.

The closing session of the court will convene Friday at 5 p. m. Speeches will be made by both prosecutor and the two defense counselors and sentence probably will be passed before the week-end. Numerous organizations throughout Russia are demanding death for the accused.

Ramsin's Confession False, Says Brother

Paris, Dec. 3 (AP)—Matin today printed an interview with Dr. Ramsin, brother of Prof. Leonid Ramsin, who is on trial in Moscow on charges of being a counter-revolutionary. Dr. Ramsin asserted his brother could not possibly have conducted any of the negotiations in Paris to which he has confessed.

The professor came to Paris with other Soviet experts on business connected with his department, Dr Ramsin said, and during his stay was always under the close surveillance of the Russian Communist party.

HOOVER RAPPED FOR FAILING TO USE HUGE FUND

Democrats Demand Quick Action on $72,558,000 Available for Public Works

Washington, Dec. 3 (INS)—Demands were voiced in the House today for speedy expansion of Federal public works to relieve unemployment, with President Hoover being criticized for alleged failure to spend money already provided by Congress for construction of public buildings.

Declaring that the Democrats will co-operate to rush the building of public works, Representative Joseph W. Byrns of Tennessee, ranking Democrat on the appropriations committee, charged that the Treasury Department had failed to make good its promise to get building construction under way.

Byrns' speech followed presentation of the Treasury-Postoffice appropriation bill raising the annual appropriation for public buildings from $48,000,000 to $60,000,000 with promise of more to come.

Representative LaGuardia (R.) of New York proposed the calling of a conference of states to agree upon uniofrm state laws for shorter work days to permanently provide more employment.

"The Treasury has $72,558,000 to its credit in the public building fund which it has not used," said Byrnes. "If the President is so anxious to speed up public works why is this not used?

"As an example, funds were provided for buildings in Chattanooga and Knoxville last July 3 and sites have not even been selected.

"The Democrats stand ready to co-operate in providing every dollar we can wisely to relieve a distressing situation."

Secretary of Labor, can't take his seat in the Senate is preposterous. The Senate, itself, is the judge of its membership. The right of the people is to elect whom they please to represent them.

If, as alleged by Senator Nye, more than $500,000 was spent at the primaries to win the election for Mr. Davis, the facts, doubtless, will come out.

Mr. Davis, a poor man, until recently official of a labor union, possesses no such fortune. The people will want to know who was willing to spend more than half a million to send Mr. Davis to the Senate. Doubtless it will be found that the money was contributed by union labor, anxious to have in the Senate an able representative.

Russia possesses in vast quantities, and in quality unexcelled, the manganese necessary to modern life and used by you every day although you may not know it.

It is the metal that makes steel stronger. You use it in the axle and other parts of your automobile, big or little.

Our big steel companies get their manganese from Chiaturi, in Russia. We produce the precious metal here on a modest scale, and Russia threatens to swamp our manganese industry.

How to protect that without making the public pay too dearly is the question.

Europe learns of a five-power alliance including Hungary, Italy, Albania, Turkey and Bulgaria, to compel a revision of the Versailles and other peace treaties.

A majority of human beings, including millions in this country, believe that those treaties were unjust and dictated by war hatreds and bitterness.

Mrs. Kaley, Losing In Love, Is Dying of Gas

New York, Dec. 3—Behind the ambiguity of the word "accidental" scrawled across the blotter of the E. 67th st. police station, lies a story of tears and heartbreak which had this climax yesterday when smart set friends of Mrs. Alfred Kaley, divorced wife of Charley Kaley, Broadway band leader and playboy, found her unconscious from gas in the luxury of her apartment at 19 E. 74th st.

New York, Dec. 3 (AP)—Mrs. Martha Bevins, 20-year-old "flying housewife" attempting to set a women's transcontinental air record, was forced down at Jacksonville, Pa., 40 miles from Easton, she said in a message to North Beach Airpoirt this morning.

DRAFT FOR DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE COMPLETED AT GENEVA

NO DATE SET FOR OPENING OF PARLEY

Dissatisfying Agreements Reached Forecast Failure of League Once More

Geneva, Dec. 3 (US)—The draft of the disarmament convention to be submitted to a general world disarmament conference, although admittedly satisfying no one in its present state, was completed by the Preparatory Disarmament Commission of the League of Nations last night.

The convention is a patchwork of compromises which furnishes the flimsiest skeleton for a world arms limitation conference.

FAILURE SEEN

Opinion here is generally agreed that if the conference is unable to make more progress than the commission, disarmament—which the League of Nations has promised for 11 years—is still far off.

The American delegation, headed by Hugh S. Gibson, ambassador to Belgium, made numerous reservations, the chief of which was objection to the budgetary method of armament limitation.

Indicative of the feeling of disquietude within the commission was the vote, after a heated fight, which rejected, 14 against 4, the proposal of Count Von Bernstorff of Germany that the league council meeting in January summon the world disarmament conference to convene on Nov. 5, 1931. Ambassador Gibson abstained from voting.

DATE UP TO LEAGUE

The commission finally adopted a resolution urging the league council merely to fix a date for the conference at its discretion.

This met with a bitter sally from Count von Bernstorff, who told the commission:

"If ten months are not enough in which to prepare for the conference, then ten years would be insufficient."

Lord Cecil, angrily accused von Bernstorff of playing for the support of public opinion. Bernstorff retaliated with:

"My dear sir, the public is already quite disgusted with the disarmament efforts of this commission."

It became more apparent today that there will be no Italo-French naval agreement reached during the life of this commission.

Burton, on Air, Warns U. S. of League Court Snare

Washington, Dec. 3—European nations are seeking to embroil the United States in their problems by urging American adherence to the League Court, H. Ralph Burton, prominent attorney, declared last night in a radio address. He said:

"Instead of a guarantee of peace, it is almost an assurance that in any conflict in Europe or elsewhere our army and navy and our men can be impressed into service to compel obedience to the mandates of the League of Nations, bolstered up by the judicial decrees of its self-created World Court.

"'World Court' is a misnomer. 'League Court' is a more appropriate appellation and the one used in practically all European countries today.

"The court's judges are selected by the League and paid by the League.

"The assembly of the League of Nations makes the laws under which the court operates. We would have but one vote against 54 in the assembly and but one against 10 in the court."

EXCLUSIVE!

The following is the first and only authentic account of Mrs. Jessie Keith-Miller's fight for life in her flight from Havana, enroute to Miami. She was blown off her course last Friday to Andros Island, the largest of the Bahama group. From there she went to Nassau in a small motorboat, accompanied by one of her countrymen. She arrived there Monday afternoon. She was joined there yesterday (Tuesday) by Capt. W. N. Lancaster, her business associate, who flew to Nassau from Miami. They then returned to Andros Island to salvage her plane.

Special Wireless Dispatch via Tropical Radio

Nassau, Bahama Islands, Dec. 3—This is my first and only account of my terrific battle with life and death in raging gales high above a mad sea.

That I am here, safe and sound, to write this narrative of the most dramatic encounter a lone woman ever waged in the air is as profound a mystery to me as it is to those who gave me up as lost when I failed to reach my goal last Friday.

STRUGGLES WITH SHIP

The story of how I passed through this black ordeal fills me with retrospective horror as I chronicle it.

I left Havana last Friday at 9 a. m. I had favorable weather reports, but was confronted with strong head winds. The ceiling was good.

I set my compass on a course of 42 degrees and flew for an hour and a half, expecting to sight the Florida keys momentarily.

I flew on for another hour, but still there was no sight of land.

I became a little anxious. I had a terrible struggle to keep the ship right side up. Believing my compass must be set right, I continued on for another hour, and still there was no sight of land.

I did not know whether to return to Cuba or to continue on. Every minute I expected to sight land.

The gale, which had buffeted me from the start, increased, and the sea was terribly rough. I saw no ship or landmarks. The clouds were heavy, but the visibility was fair.

After four hours I began to get slightly panicky. I wished I had somebody with me. I climbed to an altitude of 7000 feet, searching for land. I saw nothing but an angry ocean and storm clouds.

GROWS DESPERATE

The gale increased and I began to get desperate. I thought it was all over with me and I contemplated diving with the ship head first in o the sea and get the agony over quickly, but decided to fight a while longer.

My feet were nearly dumb trying to keep the ship straight, but had to trust to my compass, so kept going on the same course.

After five hours, not knowing whether I was east or west of my course, at last saw a distinct line where the deep blue ocean ended and pale green water began. I looked at the chart and decided I was in Florida bay, as the chart said "water three to six feet deep around the tip of Florida."

I saw two small sailboats at anchor and flew around them, skimming water, shouting, "Which way to Miami?" Of course, the native crews did not know what I meant and merely waved greetings.

I gave this effort to my bearings up as a bad job and continued on the same compass course. To my utter joy I saw land ahead 20 minutes later.

WATCHES FOR KEYS

I still thought I was near the tip of Florida, so turned east and followed the coast. The land was half-submerged by swamps and lakes. But I kept watching for the Keys to check my position and failing to see them continued for an hour and a half, when my gas supply became nearly exhausted.

By this time I was within sight of a small native village and circled four times to find the best possible landing place.

Again I was confronted with an impossible situation. There was no landing place, so I flew on another 10 miles.

The country got worse instead of better, so I returned to the village. It was not possible to land on the beach, as the tide was in the wind, but I had to get down, as in a few minutes my plane would be without power.

With almost full power I stalled the engine and pancaked into thick bushes and undergrowth. The ship was nearly nosed over, but somehow it fell back on even keel.

NATIVES SWARM UP

I got out of the plane, not knowing whether I was in Mexico or not. Natives swarmed around me, and I thought for a while I was on a cannibal island. Then to my great surprise and relief I discovered they spoke English.

My first question was:

"Who does this island belong to?"

"King George."

It was Andros Island, of the Bahama group.

The natives gave evidence of willingness to be friendly, but first they wanted to know my name. Then one, who proved to be my namesake, a Mrs. Miller of ebony hue, invited me to tea.

Later I was told there was a telegraph station on the island and I started out to look for it, only to find that it was 16 miles away.

There were no roads, no horses, no bicycles, no way to get to the station except to walk.

STARTS OVERLAND

A native boy agreed to act as my guide and we started off at 4:30 in the afternoon. I walked three miles, ploughing through sandy beaches. My heels soon became blistered. Every step was extremely painful.

The wind was so strong I could make very little headway, as when not ploughing through the sand I had to climb over sharp rocks.

Fortunately I had a pair of pliers in my briefcase and sat down at the first convenient spot and cut the heels off my shoes.

By the time this had been accomplished I was confronted with another difficulty. It had become quite dark. Also, to proceed it was necessary to scramble down a twenty-foot rocky cliff.

I became alarmed because I did not know where my native guide was taking me. All I could do was to hope for the best.

At 11:30 o'clock at night, having walked thirteen miles through inky darkness, we came to a small habitation. I stopped for water. Then to my complete dismay, a dusky gentleman, claiming to be a Scotsman, informed me that to get to the wireless station it would be necessary to cross three miles of water.

He offered the further discouragement that no one would row me across because the sea was too rough.

UNABLE TO CONTINUE

By this time my feet were so swollen and sore I could not walk another step. I had taken no nourishment all day and was feeling faint from the long experience.

My new host, the "Scotsman," invited me into the other room of his two-room hut to rest. There were no lights, but he guided me to a bed.

Thoroughly exhausted, I lay down, and was just dozing off when I felt a movement close by my side. This gave me an awful fright.

I struck a match and discovered a black baby peacefully sleeping beside me and by the side of the baby was the mother, the blackest negress I have ever seen.

The bed was slightly lively, but we three slept peacefully together. There were four other children sleeping on the floor.

At 3 a. m. my host decided a little entertainment was in order, and produced a wheezy old accordion.

He endeavored to entertain me with "Sweet Adeline." This aroused the children, who proceeded to howl down the accordion.

At dawn I was brought a basin of water, and my host, in the spirit of true hospitality, offered me his toothbrush. Not wishing to hurt his feelings, I thanked him and placed it behind the basin.

HIRES OARSMEN

We then proceeded to the bight. The wind was still blowing a gale force. No one could be induced to row me across. I waited in a native house, where the whole village congregated to stare at me. After I had become almost desperate, two negroes, coaxed by the sight of money, agreed to row me to the other side.

It was rough going and I was thoroughly drenched. On landing I had to walk three miles to the British commissioner's house. Arriving there, I was told the radio was out of commission and there was no chance of communicating with the outside world.

The mail boat had been held up for three days owing to the storm, and no boats were able to leave for Nassau, where the nearest radio station is located.

SQUALS IMPERIL BOAT

The only white people on this island were the Commissioner, his wife, a priest and a fellow Australian, Percy Frederick Cavill, at one time the champion swimmer of the world. Mr. Cavill offered to sail me to Nassau, seventy miles distant.

The following day we started off in a 20-foot boat, powered by a one-cylinder engine. Three squalls hit us and it was an exciting trip.

After navigating dangerous reefs for two hours in darkness, with huge waves breaking over us, we decided to heave to in the shelter of a cove for the remainder of the night.

Being an Australian, Mr. Cavill was extremely resourceful. He brought a log of wood, made a fire in a small grate on the boat and made me a really excellent cup of tea.

We had bully beef and native bread, and, believe me, it was very welcome. I had been without food for two days.

At dawn we started off again in a very rough sea, and from that experience I feel now that I can sail a boat as well as fly an airplane.

Shortly after 3 o'clock we arrived in Nassau without an accident and it was very wonderful to be among friends once more.

I am confident we can wheel my ship on to the beach at Andros Island again, and if this is possible I will take off for Miami tomorrow.

I have received scores of congratulatory messages, so many that it would break me to answer them all. Please thank every one for me.

MRS. THAYER, IN BREAKDOWN, QUITS STAND

Wife of Rich Sportsman, Sobbing Violently, Is Given a Rest in Divorce Case

Worcester, Dec. 3—Mrs. Jane H. Thayer, sobbing violently, had to quit the witness chair for a rest today in Probate Court after telling how affectionate her husband, Fred B. Thayer, wealthy sportsman and retired manufacturer, was on the day on which he served her with divorce papers.

Mrs. Thayer was testifying for the second day in the double divorce proceedings, in which she and her husband charge each other with infidelity.

She sobbed frequently during her recital and broke down completely after refusing to repeat a conversation between her and her husband which took place in her bedroom at 4 o'clock in the morning of the day following the serving of the papers.

LEAVES COURTROOM.

She was asked about this conversation by her own lawyer, Clarence E. Tupper, and refused to repeat it either in open court or privately to Judge Atwood, saying it was "not fit for anybody to hear."

Previously she told of being served with the divorce papers on January 11, 1930, declaring this was a "distinct shock" because her husband had been very affectionate that day during a motor trip to Flint Pond, on which she sat in the front seat between Thayer and Albert Desjardins, the chauffeur, whom Thayer names in his suit.

KEPT ARM AROUND HER

"My husband had his arm around me all the way out and back," she said.

Asked point blank by her counsel if she was unduly friendly to Desjardins, Mrs. Thayer replied.

"No, never."

Her husband, who was seated in a front row between his daughter, Miss Carrie Thayer, and his nurse, let an audible "Oh" escape him as she said this.

Mrs. Thayer was questioned about the night of Jan. 31, when, according to her husband's story, she arrived home by automobile and entered the house and her room with Desjardins.

She said it was her maid, Mary, who arrived with the chauffeur, as she herself had not left the house that evening. She said they visited her in her room, and that accounted for Desjardins' shadow on the curtain, which Thayer told of seeing.

She professed complete ignorance of having been found drinking in her bedroom one morning with Albert Desjardins, of which her husband told.

"My husband once instructed me never to call him 'the chauffeur,'" she went on. "He said Albert was a friend and we were to call him Albert."

"How old is Albert Desjardins?" asked Atty. Tupper.

"I think about 26," she said.

"And may I ask your age?"

"It is 42."

After some thought she said:

"No, I think it's 43. I was born in 1888."

Happy Daughter Is Safe

MRS. BEVERIDGE MRS. MILLER

A TERRIFIC GALE, a compass going "haywire" and a search for a place to land, tells the dramatic story of Mrs. J. M. Keith-Miller's flight from Havana. For days the Australian aviatrix was mysteriously missing on an island in the Bahamas. Her mother, Mrs. E. M. L. Beveridge of New York city, was the first to receive word of her daughter's safety. Dates Announced for Eastern Fair

FORMER HUB WOMAN HELD BY FASCISTS

Widow of Poet de Bosis Arrested With 25 Others in Plot Against Mussolini

Rome, Dec. 3 (INS)—Twenty-six persons, including several newspapermen, city officials of Milan and Rome, were under arrest today on charges of belonging to organizations that plotted against the lives of Fascist leaders.

An American woman, Mrs. Lillian Vernon de Bosis, 62, former resident of Boston and St. Louis, is among the prisoners.

WIDOW OF POET

She is the widow of an Italian poet, Adolfo de Bosis, who won considerable literary recognition by his translation of Shelley's works.

Specifically, the prisoners are charged with "conducting a clandestine organization and plotting against the regime." The Fascist newspapers brand the prisoners as "intellectuals who are endangering the Fascist regime."

In addition to the arrests in Rome and Milan, Fascist police said they uncovered widespread Communist activities in the departments of Romagla and Emilia.

All the prisoners will be tried before special military tribunals. Most of the prisoners belong to the Liberal and Catholic political parties.

SENSATION IN ROME

Announcement of the arrests caused a sensation in Rome social circles, where several of the prisoners are well known. Many American residents of the capital move in these circles.

Renzo Rendi, correspondent for a Boston newspaper, was among the prisoners, but later was released after being charged with circulating anti-Fascisti pamphlets.

In Milan, Riccardo Bauer, former editor of the Liberal Review, "Caffe," was among those taken into custody, as were Maj. Ferrucio Parris, former sub-editor of Corriere de la Sera, and Prof. Ernesto Rossi.

200 German Fascists Seized Near Breslau

Breslau, Germany, Dec. 3 (AP)—Rumors that Fascists were planning formation of a frontier defense force against "Polish aggression," caused police to raid a mansion near here today where they arrested 200 uniformed Fascists and seized a quantity of arms and munitions.

MOTHER ASKS HELPING HAND FOR FOOD

In the huge pile of letters placed today on the desk of the Helping Hand editor there lay a message from a mother who, for the first time in her life, is compelled to ask the aid of strangers.

Her appeal in other years would be regarded as uncommon but is typical of many received this year. She tells of the struggle she has made for four long months to feed and clothe her family without seeking help from anyone—she tells of the futile efforts of her husband to find work—of her own attempt to find employment and of her fear that her family will be forced from their home through failure to pay rent.

The letter, apparently written by a woman of refinement, is one of many that asks for food and sufficient clothing to protect from the cold. It is filed as Case 77 and any person wishing to aid this family may obtain the address by calling the Helping Hand editor at the Boston Evening American, Liberty 4000.

MOTHER'S PLEA
(Refer to Case 77)

This is the first time in my life I have had to write a letter like this to anyone and it comes very hard to me. For four months, nearly five, I have fought against asking aid. We have always been comfortable and lived as well as any poor people could but the unemployment situation has got us with a vengeance.

Now it has become a case where if my husband doesn't get work very soon we will certainly die of cold and starvation in the streets. I am expecting every time I see the landlord to be told that we must get out.

I have been doing a day's work when I can find it, also hour work, and that is what has kept us actually from starving all these months. Our gas service has been discontinued and the electricity is going to be shut off if I don't pay my bill soon. I cannot make enough money to pay any of my bills.

My little children need underclothing, shoes and overcoats. There are three aged between nine and 12. Will you please send us a Christmas basket.

Anyone needing a good chauffeur, or a man for any kind of honest work, please call at our home. Will some one please help us financially so we can keep our house together and get a little coal. I thank you for any interest shown in behalf of my family.

FAMILY IN NEED
(Refer to Case 78)

I have a little story to tell you of a poor unfortunate home I visited today in making a fire inspection. I found a young mother and two children trying to keep warm with newspapers. All I am asking is that you send a basket that will be well used. This woman's husband is out of work and she is too proud to ask for help or charity. Please keep her name a secret as she does not know I am writing. So whatever you do for me, I hope some day I will be able to repay you.

This family lives in Boston. Anyone wishing to aid may call the Boston Evening American Helping Hand, Liberty 4000, and refer to Case 78.

WIDOW'S PLEA
(Refer to Case 79)

I am a widow with four children. The oldest is 11 and the youngest nine months old. Two boys and two girls. Please try and send me some clothes, some castaway dress or any kind, for I will make them over to fit. I would like to keep them warm for school.

This woman lives in Fall River. Anyone wishing to aid may call the Boston Evening American Helping Hand, Liberty 4000, and refer to Case 79.

Governor Allen Helps

GOVERNOR ALLEN RUTH ETTING

RUTH ETTING, appearing in person, at the RKO Keith Boston Theater, went to the State House, yesterday, to see Governor Allen. Governor Allen received the stage star cordially and bought tickets for the Boston Evening American Basket Fund midnight show to be held December 15 at the Keith Boston Theater. Let everybody help. (Staff photo.)

GOVERNOR BUYS FIRST TICKETS

Ruth Etting, petite Ziegfeld star, appearing this week at the Keith-Boston Theater, today officially opened the sale of tickets for the midnight show in aid of the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American.

Gov. Frank G. Allen was Miss Etting's first customer, and he responded with customary graciousness, presenting her with a sizeable check in return for two tickets.

The governor was the first of many notables to purchase tickets for the benefit show to be given at the Keith-Boston Theater, (formerly Keith-Albee), at midnight, Dec. 15.

The program, arranged by Harry Rice, manager of the Keith-Boston will include stars playing in Boston theaters during the week of December 15. Orchestras from several leading night clubs will be on hand. Mickey Alpert's Cocoanut Grove Orchestra having volunteered to open the show and Jacques Renard offering the services of his Mayfair Club band as the closing number.

The RKO management has donated the theater and its entire staff to the Christmas Basket Fund for the evening.

Tickets are on sale at the box offices of both Keith theaters. All floor and balcony seats are priced at only $1.

Remember the cause—for the needy families who are forced by their destitute circumstances to appeal for aid to the Christmas Basket Fund. Every penny taken in at the box office for the midnight show will be used to purchase food, clothing and fuel for people in want.

King Carol of Rumania in Quest for Consort

Bucharest, Dec. 3 (US)—King Carol II, who is reported to have ordered all members of the royal family to leave Rumania this month so that he might rule the country undisturbed, is troubled again by the problem of finding a queen.

Since Helene has steadily refused a conciliation with the husband she divorced, three courses remain open to Carol in his search for a consort, according to rumors prevalent in court circles today.

The court is whispering that the King is negotiating for the hand of a Swedish princess, presumably Princess Ingrid, whose name has been so often mentioned in connection with the Prince of Wales. Princess Ingrid is the daughter of Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf of Sweden.

Another report persists in linking Carol with the house of Bourbon, and the report is now that Princess Beatriz, 21-year-old daughter of King Alfonso of Spain, is the favored one.

Building Program Allotted $87,924,450

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—The Government expects to complete its half a billion dollar public building program three years ahead of schedule by expediting work to relieve unemployment.

The annual treasury supply bill today allotted $87,924,450 in continuation of the program for the next year. For actual construction $61,305,000 was set aside.

Initiated in 1928, the half a billion dollar program was expected to continue for 10 years.

Domestic Air Mail Service Expensive

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—The fast domestic air mail service will cost the government $20,000,000 in the next fiscal year. In addition, the annual postoffice supply bill, reported today to the House, provided $7,000,000 for foreign air mail service.

The estimated excess of the cost of aircraft service over postage revenue from air mail during the year 1930 was $13,864,174.

Former Presidential Yacht for Surveys

Washington, Dec. 3 (US)—The U. S. S. Mayflower, which for 27 years served as the yacht for Presidents, will be recommissioned in February for survey duty in the Caribbean.

The craft has been out of commission since June, 1929, and has been offered for sale four times.

U. S. to Pay $10,000 in Heart Disease Probe

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—In searching the human heart to learn why its failing is the prime cause of death the Government will spend $10,000 next fiscal year. The fund was provided in the annual treasury supply bill reported to the House today.

$15,000,000 TO STOP RUM FLOW

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—So highly organized is liquor running on the borders that the Coast Guard will require more than $15,000,000 to conduct its operations next fiscal year.

The House appropriations committee today recommended a total of $32,897,582 for the guard's 1932 appropriation.

Rear Admiral Francis C. Billard, commandant, said the breakup of "Rum Row" on the Atlantic coast had not ended liquor running because "the rum interests since then have become highly organized, have large amounts of money at their disposal and now operate in a different way."

Canada's denying clearance to liquor vessels bound for the United States, he said, has resulted in a marked reduction of smuggling activities on the Great Lakes, but "on the other hand there appear to be more vessels engaged in attempting smuggling on our ocean coasts. The smugglers are using an extensive radio system in code."

Quackless Duck, Robot Hen, Feature Poultry Exhibit

Chicago, Dec. 3 (AP)—A quackless duck, a high-hat goose and a robot hen came to town today for a four-day visit.

They were among 4000 exhibits for the International Poultry Exhibition, which opens tomorrow.

The duck can express itself only in a low hiss: the goose parades in the full evening wear—silk hat and all, and the hen, a creature of wheels, wires and bellows, was constructed by the Federal Department of Agriculture to show how eggs are made.

U. S. Men Kill Two Mexicans

GERMAN SLASH $345,000,000

Berlin, Dec. 3 (AP)—Germany is going to cut her annual expenditures by $345,000,000, Hermann Dietrich, minister of finance, told the Reichstag today as it assembled to consider Chancellor Bruening's program of drastic financial reform.

"We must cut deeply into every department," Dietrich said. "We must live like spartans for the next three years, and we must resign ourselves to it.

"If by chance our income should be greater in those years than we expect, we will have to use any excess to wipe our our debts and cut down our taxes."

Black Nail Polish Paris' Latest Vogue

Paris, Dec. 3 (INS)—One of the results of the vogue for black and white modes is the new black varnish for smart nails. It has a translucent effect something like a black opal or black pearl. "Russian ballet" or "sugar-stick" pink nail varnish is seen on a few chic women, but vivid claret-colored nails seem passe.

The origin of the modern saxophone has been traced to the Philippine Islands. The natives of Luzon for years have been playing weird looking instruments which resemble the saxophone. One young man has attained such skill that he is now the leading musician of Luzon and is often called the "Rudy Vallee" of the Philippines. Read about this in the American Weekly section of the next Boston Sunday Advertiser.

'L' DEFICIT MAY BE MADE UP

There is a good chance of making up the present deficit of the Boston Elevated Railway in the winter months, and the report that metropolitan cities and towns face a big assessment to wipe out the losses is not founded on fact, company officials said today.

The $1,000,000 reserve fund has been exhausted, but this is not unusual at this time of year, said Chairman Henry I. Harriman of the public trustees.

The fiscal year does not end until next June 30, and the heaviest travel is in winter, he explained.

Louis A. Mathieu, publicity director said:

"It is true October and November are behind other years in revenue but that is not so alarming as reported. Our expenses this year are the lowest since 1918, excepting 1921 when there was a sharp reduction in wages.

"A great deal of the loss in revenue may be traced directly to unemployment. Poor families are walking, because they haven't the cash to ride. But there are seven months in which to make up the deficit."

Scores Hail Lomasney Still in Ring on 71st Birthday

Just like any other day Martin Lomasney started his regular 14 hours on the job at the gas-lighted Hendricks Club today.

His friends, however, reminded him it was not just another day, but the 71st anniversary of the birth of the political leader of the West End.

"KICK IN ME YET"

December 3, 1859, meant nothing to the man who held many a political battle of the past 45 years in the palm of his hand, but his mail was bulky with scores of messages of its importance.

Flowers, however, were banned.

That has been a rule of Lomasney birthdays or other festive occasions in his life.

"Flowers are for dead ones and there's many a kick in me yet," he declared some years ago. And woe betide him who forgets.

"How does it feel to be 71?"

"No different than 70 or 72," was the typical Lomasney retort.

"Every day is the same to me. Some of my old cronies are buried, but I feel better now than 10 years ago by just keeping the hand in to work so I won't die from dry rot.

"I enjoy poking at things that are not just according to Hoyle and see that they are put back accordingly. That's what makes work fun for me."

QUITS AT MIDNIGHT

Lomasney's day starts at 10 a. m., and all day long and far into the night a steady stream of his followers wend in and out of the office, seeking advice and aid, mostly aid. At midnight he calls it a day.

111 DEER KILLED IN TWO DAYS

More than a hundred deer have been killed by Massachusetts hunters since the opening of the season, according to reports to Director William C. Adams of the state Division of Fisheries and Game.

Yesterday's report of 75 bagged brought the total killings to 111. The weights of the deer killed ranged from 125 pounds to 330 pounds. Joseph F. Greene, of Great Barrington, reported the killing of the 330-pound buck in New Marlboro.

Edgar McCarthy, a 19-year-old Charlestown youth, making use of his first hunting license, shot a 225-pound buck in Brimfield.

Letters Form American Readers

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Editor Boston American:

Don't expect to get rid of unemployment. It is a recurring problem in this whirligig world. It will come and go.

Make up your mind to this. But it will set everyone on the edge of discovering permanent solutions and adopting adequate means for regulating employment so that it will not be diverted into unemployment.

We want conferences to study problems in trade that lead to employment. They should be held in every large community. Unemployment is not a disease that must be expected as scarlet fever or smallpox. It can be planned to avoid it. Compulsory unemployment insurance, higher wages, shorter hours, short working week, higher child labor standards, no night work for women, and many other items must be considered thoroughly.

While we may not be able to get rid of unemployment, there are many ways by which it can be checked and made less of a menace in the life of every worker. I would like to hear from others on this matter.

Move to Abolish Primary System Hit

Editor Boston American:

It is somewhat disturbing to learn that Mr. Donahue, chairman of the Democratic State committee, has recently become a convert to and evidently is willing to espouse a movement which has as its vowed object the abolition of the primary system.

The writer does not know whether Mr. Donahue's recent pronouncement along these lines expresses merely his own personal views on the matter, or whether it is the voice of the Democratic State committee speaking through its accredited spokesman and sounding board.

Whatever be the origin of Mr. Donahue's sentiments regarding the abolition of the direct primary system, it might be well to state that the members of the Democratic party have absolutely no intention of handing over, either to Mr. Donohue or to the state committee, which he represents, the power and right which is now firmly lodged in their hands relative to the picking and choosing of candidates for public office.

Mr. Donahue and the state committee have done some fine work in co-operating with the people. But let Mr. Donahue remember he is neither the public nor the Democratic party.

JAMES F. DESMOND.

Jail Might Put Stop to Auto Accidents

Editor Boston American:

If we are a civilized people, we must stop the slaughter of innocent men, women and children by automobiles. There is only one way to stop it and that is by punishing each and every one who injures or kills a person by speeding.

If drivers knew that for every accident they will be punished, they would be careful and accidents would be avoided. A fine of $10 or $25 will never stop accidents. Jail or the forfeit of the license will do it.

I hope the authorities will eventually adopt such punishments for those who maim or kill persons.

HYMAN FREEDMAN

Law Schools Closing in Latin-American Countries

Editor Boston American:

Do your readers know that law schools are closing in Latin America? This means that young men down there as well as young women are giving attention to business interests, engineering and the sciences.

Panama School of Law closed last year. But the School of Arts and Crafts as well as the manual training schools remain open.

Rosario University college of law at Bogota founded in 1637 will not open next year and its place will be taken with a college of natural science. This is the oldest and most noted school of law in Latin America.

People are learning down there that it pays to agree, hold your tongue, count 100 before shooting anyone and keep the laws in your head, when you walk the streets or country ways. But they must have lawyers and they have them.

WM. E. ALBERTSON.

Lauds Christmas Basket Fund; Urges All to Help

Editor Boston American:

Bear ye one another's burdens. Nothing so timely as that now. We cannot afford to be selfish. We are not human, if we are. Mothers are suffering more in this present crisis of unemployment than others. They suffer because they see their children suffer. The aged are feeling the pinch of this congestion in business. Many movements are active to help this condition. Some are always responding. Others are delaying. This is a mistake, because every delay means no relief from pressing anxiety.

Your Christmas basket enterprise has in the past accomplished so many good results that it has stabilized itself in the minds of all people who have another's interests at heart.

Keep saying over to yourself: "Bear Ye One Another's Burdens." Think of others, while you are having clear sailing yourself. You are getting along. Lend a hand to others. They need your lifting power. Let them see how far they can make a dollar go.

Science Surprised by Action of Moon

Editor Boston American:

The moon is useful for many other matters besides helping along romantic love in the gloaming. A Boston scientist has told us in his talk recently that during the total eclipse of the sun in Samoa, there was also a total eclipse of radio activity.

No one then had any suspicion that the moon so far removed from the sun, could eliminate all information on the earth and in the air. We have claimed the moon runs the tides, but we know that it is doing business in other directions also.

Scientists get a set back sometimes. The moon gave it to them this time when the moon cut them off from information when depending upon the mysterious waves.

We are getting information all the time. Boston is a mine of knowledge. You can find out anything in Boston, if you know where to go. It is the only city in the world that has so much canned knowledge. The subconscious minds of Boston people are just packed with truths and only need a tapping to get it. I have learned this from my stay here.

Reader Finds Too Much Wet News in Papers

Editor Boston American:

Why do the newspapers give so much space to the wet side of prohibition? It looks rather suspicious to the writer.

The writer has traveled more than 20 years, making the larger cities in Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Kentucky. Spend much time in Cleveland, Toledo, Columbus, Cincinnati, Detroit, So. Bend, Ind., Ft. Wayne, Ind., Louisville. In selling department stores used to do lot of entertaining, dine and wine.

Now they tell me not entertainment, but prices they want. I rarely ever see a drunk any more, or even one under the "influence." Being in Detroit on week-end, a friend said let's go over to Windsor bridge, being Saturday night I was expecting to see some sights. I had read in "the papers" how bad things were in Detroit, but found it was all "bull."

I was in Louisville, Ky., in October at the Seeback Hotel and at 11 to 12 p. m. where they used to be "wild" and no sign of booze. A taxi driver said he would take me to "a place." I said to a friend, some change, when you have to hunt 'em up and he said wait 'till you get to Boston, they are all "wet" and joined the Democrats. So now am anxious to see a Boston "drunk" and some one said they would likely be laying up on the "Common" as there was the "old place" for them.

Doctors to Speak

Dr. C. R. G. Forrester of Chicago and Dr. William Rogers will speak tonight at the meeting and dinner at the Copley-Plaza of the Massachusetts Society of Examining Physicians.

WOMEN'S CLUBS JOIN WORK FOR BASKET FUND

Organizations throughout Greater Boston have accomplished much in the past years in relieving the sufferings of many poor families at Christmas time.

This year there is a greater demand than ever for their services and several have already called at the office of the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American to obtain the addresses of needy families.

The Women's Auxiliary of the Yankee Division Club requested names of five families in Greater Boston who appealed for aid. Before evening they had called at each home and provided food and clothing to hungry children and mothers who are in straightened circumstances.

The Lambda Sigma Girls of Dorchester, a school girls' club, took the addresses of three families in their district who were in need of help.

The editor of the Christmas Basket Fund has many more addresses on file which must be visited. There are hundreds of cold and hungry children who have been waiting for help many days. Some ask only for plain food and others for warm clothing. You can help by calling the Christmas Basket Fund at Liberty 4000 or by sending a donation—large or small—to the Basket Fund editor at the office of the Boston Evening American.

The time is short. HELP THEM TODAY.

X-RAY AIDS IN LEUKEMIA

Los Angeles, Dec. 3 (AP)—Leukemia, a disease characterized as more dangerous than cancer, was described to the convention of the Radiological Society of North America here today.

Dr. Roy G. Giles of Temple, Tex., said leukemia so far has baffled science. He expressed hope, however, that it may ultimately submit to X-ray, which now, he said, at least gives a greater degree of comfort to sufferers than any other treatment. When the normal number of white blood cells in the body increase a hundredfold, Dr. Giles explained, leukemia results.

An electric knife which is replacing the surgeon's scalpel was described by Dr. George A. Wyeth of New York. The electric knife not only performs the function of a scalpel, but sterilizes and seals the incisions, he said.

Chronic dyspepsia may be the warning of cancer, suggested Dr. Maurice Dwyer of Seattle. He warned against late diagnosis of stomach disorders.

Tobacco Imports Taxed

Canberra, Australia, Dec. 3 (AP)—American exporters may be adversely affected by increased import duties which Australia is imposing on tobacco and some kinds of wire. The duty of two cents on kerosene is to be lifted.

CONGRESS DRY' SAYS SHEPHERD

Washington, Dec. 3 (INS)—"Congress is as dry as ever; there is still an overwhelming majority in both branches of Congress in favor of prohibition. There is no change for modification of the Volstead Act."

This pronouncement by Senator Shepherd (D.) of Texas, father of the prohibition amendment, was the dry answer today to the new wet drive for modification of prohibition to permit the manufacture and sale of 4 per cent beer and wine.

The complaints of wet Republicans and Democrats alike against President Hoover's silence on prohibition in his message to Congress were met by smiles from administration leaders. Senator Walsh, Democrat, of Massachusetts, a wet, said:

"The country need expect no decisive announcement from the White House with respect to prohibition during Mr. Hoover's term as President."

Hawks on 1000-Mile Flight to Memphis

New York, Dec. 3 (INS)—Capt. Frank Hawks left Roosevelt Field at 10:47 a. m. today on a non-stop flight to Memphis, Tenn., more than 1000 miles. Hawks holds the transcontinental non-stop flight record. He expected to land in Memphis in five or six hours.

Manager of Cafe Keeps Open for Thief

Salem, Dec. 3 (AP)—Willis Helms, night manager of a chain lunroom, was closing shop early today when a telephone message ordered him to wait until a representative of the district manager arrived to check up. The "representative" arrived, sent Helms down cellar to check stock, and left with the contents of the cash register.

What $16,000 buys in The American Weekly

A full page in color nearly three times as big as any other magazine page in the world . . . 6,000,000 families at a cost of less than ⅓ cent per family . . . The attention of the entire family instead of a single buying factor.

Is this NATIONAL MAGAZINE coverage?

BECAUSE of the fact that The American Weekly is distributed through the medium of seventeen great metropolitan newspapers, the question is frequently asked, "Does The American Weekly actually give national magazine coverage?"

That's a fair question and we shall do our best to answer it fairly.

Study the outline map at the top of this page and you will get some idea of the coverage an advertiser buys through the use of The American Weekly.

Each black dot on this map represents 100 families who regularly read The American Weekly.

The sum total of these dots represents nearly 6,000,000 families in forty-eight states who buy this great magazine every week.

A further analysis of these dots reveals that 86.7% of The American Weekly circulation is concentrated in the twenty-five states that return 83.2% of all income tax statements.

The next largest magazine competitor has less than 81% of its circulation in these twenty-five states—which means less than half the circulation of The American Weekly in these vital states.

A further analysis of these dots reveals that:

In 536 of America's 812 towns and cities of 10,000 population and over it concentrates and dominates.

In each of 185 cities, The American Weekly reaches one out of every two families.
In 132 more cities, it reaches 40 to 50%.
In an additional 102 cities, it reaches 30 to 40%.
In another 117 cities, it reaches 20 to 30%.

—and, in addition, nearly 2,000,000 families in thousands of other communities, large and small, regularly buy The American Weekly.

Nearly six million families located in the richest buying areas of this prosperous nation at the lowest cost per family.

A page advertisement in full color, nearly three times the size of any other magazine page, at a cost of less than one-third cent per family.

Is this national magazine coverage, Mr. National Advertiser?

WIFE A SUICIDE, SHEPARD HINTS

Kansas City, Kans., Dec. 3 (AP)—Possible lines of defense were indicated in a statement by Maj. Charles A. Shepard issued today in advance of his trial tomorrow on a charge of murdering his second wife by administering poison.

The 53-year-old army physician's statement asserted his innocence and recalled that Mrs. Shepard to save infected teeth had used excessively an antiseptic containing poison. He asserted, too, that Mrs. Shepard was an alcoholic, who often suggested death as a means of escaping intense melancholia.

He said she had filched whiskey from his physician's kit, in which were poisonous antiseptics, and added:

"She had been at that satchel that night when she became ill."

Shepard told of becoming engaged five months after his wife's death to Miss Grace Brandon, 22-year-old stenographer of San Antonio, Tex., who is government witness. He said he gave her several presents, among them a motor car.

Society Stirred by Bridal Color Scheme

New York, Dec. 3 (AP)—Society is stirred by the color scheme of gowns at the latest fashionable wedding. When Miss Jane Forter became Mrs. Barclay Kountze Douglas she had a gown of ice-blue silk and a pale blue veil. The maid of honor wore turquoise blue velvet, the bridesmaids Venetian red velvet.

Best Remedy for Cough Is Easily Mixed at Home

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough or chest cold can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in millions of homes, because it gives more prompt, positive relief than anything else. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey to make a full pint. This saves two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough medicine, and gives you a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes good—children like it.

You can actually feel its penetrating, soothing action on the inflamed throat membranes. It is also absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes. At the same time, it promptly loosens the germ-laden phlegm. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief even in severe bronchial coughs which follow cold epidemics.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

More of the famous Andree pictures will be shown in the next Boston Sunday Advertiser. When the bodies of Andree and his two companions were found last August, the undeveloped films from Andree's own camera were also found. These were sealed in metal containers for 33 years and only a few were able to withstand the process of developing. More of these priceless pictures, taken at the cost of three lives in far north in 1897 are appearing in the next Boston Sunday Advertiser.

THE LAST MILE -:- -:- -:- By Lewis Allen Browne

CHAPTER II

MEANWHILE Sid Cavanaugh had been trying his best to talk Dick Walters out of his idea of marrying anyone, but he hadn't a chance in the world.

It was at this time that Sid was accosted by Abe Vance. On invitation he went up to Abe's office.

"You want to get on the right side of the fence, Sid," Abe told him, "you want to lean toward my client—get the regulation sob stuff into your stories. She is going to be freed and you might as well have the reputation of having guessed it long before the trial."

"She's guilty as he—ll, Abe," Sid told him.

Abe Vance flushed angrily.

"She is going to be freed, Cavanaugh, but at the same time we want all the help we can get—newspaper influence."

"We don't take sides, we are after facts."

"Wrong, absolutely wrong—why, if this poor girl should be found guilty it would mean that no girl would be supposed to fight for her honor."

Sid Cavanaugh laughed at this. Their argument didn't get them anywhere.

Seeing Dick Walters and Ethel Simmons in a drug store that night made Sid rather more angry than usual. He wanted to go up to them and tell Ethel what he knew about her, right in front of Dick, but he had better sense.

Next afternoon, however, he accosted Ethel as she was leaving the school of design.

"Miss Simmons," he said, lifting his hat and smiling at her. "I believe this is your property."

He handed her the garter he had found in the living room of Mert Nissinger's cottage.

Ethel took the garter, stared at it a moment and instead of turning a flaming red and being tearfully embarrassed, she smiled sweetly at him.

"Why, yes, it's mine," she said, "and I've got a nice proposition to make to you."

"You have what?" Sid Cavanaugh asked Ethel, not believing his ears, and greatly surprised that she took it so coolly when he returned her garter.

"A proposition to make, Mr. Cavanaugh."

"You're Drunk!"

They walked down the street as they talked. Ethel turned into the park.

"Let's sit here and talk it over," she invited.

Sid sat down beside her.

"I know where you found this," he said.

"You would."

"And, like all men, you think evil at once. It happens that I went to a place at the lake with Mrs. Shelton, a friend of mine who is on one of my church committees. She lives near and went over to take some slips of flowers that the man—Mr. Nissinger, I believe is his name—had asked her. We sat down in his place for a few minutes and after I had gone I missed this."

"Indeed?"

Sid decided to pretend to believe her for a while and see what she would say.

"Oh, yes."

"How, then, did you suppose I knew who owned it?"

"Why—er—I suppose Mr. Nissinger suspected it was mine and he might have told you."

"And what about the proposition you mentioned?"

"Oh, yes, I was awfully surprised when you handed this garter to me, and I was going to suggest that you keep it all a secret because some people might not understand how innocently it all came about."

"It all depends, Miss Simmons."

"On what?"

"Are you engaged to Dick Walters?"

"Well—of all things! Isn't that rather—er—nervy of you to ask such a question?"

"Not at all. Dick's my best pal—and I expect to marry his sister. I don't want to see him made a fool of, and I certainly don't want a low-down, double-crossing, little wanton like you in the family."

Ethel stood up.

"I think you are drunk," she said.

"Sit down," Sid ordered.

"I don't care to speak with—"

"Sit down and let me tell you how you lost the pretty garter—in Nissinger's living room, when you and Nissinger were having cigarettes and highballs between petting moments."

Ethel lost her composure then. She obeyed him and sat down.

She Eyed Him

"All right, Mister Nosey Cavanaugh, as long as you are poking your nose in my business—"

"I am, and it's a rather ancient business you have taken up. I dare you show me the initial he tattooed on you!!"

"Oh! Well, for goodness sake, you do know a lot, don't you? Why not mind your own business and let me alone?"

"If it wasn't for Dick Walters I certainly would. I'd say to you 'go to it,' it's none of my affair, only it happens to be because Dick is so thoroughly fooled by you and so madly in love with you. I'm not interested in your world-old proposition, but I have a proposition to make to you."

"All right, what is it? I hope you'll be reasonable. I am sure I'd be as reasonable as—"

"My proposition is this—if you are engaged to Dick, break it. If not engaged, don't get engaged. Don't marry him."

Ethel Simomns laughed with relief.

"That's easy. I wasn't sure about it anyway. I'm not crazy about him—he's an awful sap, anyway."

"He is, because he thinks you wear wings and have a halo."

Ethel laughed at this.

"You are nobody's fool, anyhow, Mr. Cavanaugh—and I am beginning to like you—I like wise boys."

Sid ignored this.

"Then I have your word that you won't marry Dick?"

"Of course you have, if you do your part."

"What's that?"

"Forget all about Mert and—and me—is that clear?"

"Certainly. And I don't expect you to break off with Dick at once. He's so crazy about you that it might raise the devil with him, but just go on and let the romance slowly die out. Will you do this?"

She Promised

"That's awfully easy. I'll let him take me places and be nice to him but that's all—I promise."

Sid left her then.

With this worry about his pal Dick, at the end Sid plunged into the Viola Forsaythe case, on the lookout for every new sensation and bit of evidence.

Occasionally he had an hour or so with Dick, usually at Mike's place, where they chatted over a glass of beer. Dick was unusually happy these days. He admitted to Sid that he expected to be formally engaged to Ethel before long because he was sure she loved him and her mother thoroughly approved of the match.

Sid wanted to tell him the truth, but knew that it would be fatal to their friendship. He felt badly about it and was afraid that when Ethel Simmons did finally turn Dick down he would become bitter, despondent and doubtless dissolute, with no telling how he would end up. Sid comforted himself with the thought that anything would be better than permitting Dick to make such an unwholesome marriage.

In the shop Dick Walters was forging ahead wonderfully well.

It was in this shipping department that Dick became acquainted with Fred Mayor, a chap a few years younger than Dick. Mayor had been improving on some shipping cases for chucks and clutches, and as Dick had charge of all the lathe shipping, he made Mayor head of the department when the former head went to work in a distant branch of the big concern.

Mayor was decidedly grateful.

He took Dick out to dinner shortly after this, at a sort of semi-private place attached to an athletic club. The membership was made up of huskies like Mayor, some hard-working boys and some amateur boxers, also certain "sports" whose source of income didn't bear investigation.

Mayor's promotion would pay him an additional five dollars a week.

Could Use It

"I sure can use that, Mr. Walters," he said as they sat in a back room of the athletic club after the dinner; "it will buy the girl friend more clothes to sport—and a skirt sure likes a guy who can clothe her swell."

"I guess you are right, Mayor. I didn't know you were married."

"Me? Married? Be your age, Mr. Walters!"

"My error—you mentioned buying clothes and I thought—" Dick hesitated.

"Aw, it's like this. Me and Elaine don't think so d—n much of this marriage game. We got a coupla swell little rooms and we get along fine; she's workin' in a candy store and we take in a lot of shows an' dances and we each of us know that the other can step out any time."

"Step out?"

"I mean, to quit."

"Perhaps you are right, Mayor," Dick answered, "and at any rate, it doesn't matter to me—it's no skin off my nose. Only I'm old-fashioned and believe in getting married."

"Yeah—gettin' married's all right I guess, but me an' Elaine is satisfied. You married, Mr. Walters?"

"No—not yet."

"A guy with a swell job like yours could sure afford it. I wish I had some real trade like machinist, like you, or somethin', but I had to hustle since I was a kid. I was twelve and I didn't have no time to go to school much and nobody to take care of me while I learned some trade."

"You're doing all right, Mayor—and here's a tip—the next time you make any big improvements in shipping cases or in anything like that, protect it, patent it, and clean up big money for yourself."

During the last two weeks Dick had seen Ethel but twice. She and Mabel Shelton, according to her story, were attending "Cheerio" Bromley's revivals every night. Most of the time Ethel's mother was under the impression that she was staying with Mrs. Shelton.

They were throwing some rather wild parties at Nissinger's lake cottage those nights. Several times Mrs. Shelton and her "friend," Charlie Wagner, were over at Nissinger's place, where Ethel did more than her share in helping to hold high revelry.

Then the "Model Murder Case" came up.

Riding Increasing on Chicago Lines

Chicago, Dec. 3 (AP)—Increases in the number of farms paid on Chicago surface cars were viewed today by G. A. Richardson, vice-president and general manager, as "a distinct indication that buying is on the up and up."

A similar trend was noted by H. G. Hardin, general superintendent in charge of transportation on the elevated lines.

British Girl Starts 10,300-Mile Flight

Croydon, England, Dec. 3 (AP)—Miss Winifred Spooner, 23, and Flying Officer E. C. T. Edwards started at 7 a. m. today, on a 10,300 mile air journey to Capetown in a monoplane. They are attempting to break the nine-day flight record to the South African city.

CHINA TROOPS BATTLE REDS

Peiping, China, Dec. 3 (AP)—There has been severe fighting during the last few days between the so-called first Red army and government troops which are attempting to secure release of the American missionary, Rev. Bert N. Nelson, and the Norwegian missionary, K. N. Tvedt. Both are held prisoners by Communists at Hwangan, in Hupeh Province.

The government side admits 200 casualties, but claims losses totaling 1000 have been inflicted on the Reds.

A relief expedition brought the missionary, Mrs. L. O. Hayward, and Miss E. Gomersall safely to Paotawchen today.

"Ready-made suds"—

New way to wash

Women tell us new form of Chipso saves time and hands. Have you tried Chipso Granules?

Mrs. J. B.—
"Rich suds soak out ground-in dirt"

"Now I put my clothes to soak in about the same time that it takes to wind the clock and put out the cat! No waiting for hot water—no 'whipping up' suds—Chipso Granules turn to suds the second even lukewarm water touches them—and the rich lather is still there next morning, when I'm ready to wash. The dirt, however, has disappeared! A few light rubs—rinsing—washing's done!"

"All the suds I want—instantly!"
says Mrs. C. P., of West Roxbury

Women who like plenty of rich, thick suds when they wash are enthusiastic about Chipso Granules. This new form of Chipso gives genuine Chipso results—with added convenience! Just a turn of the faucet—and you have a mountain of sparkling suds that "stand up" almost indefinitely! Every bit of soap is dissolved at the touch of water—every bit ready to get your clothes clean with little help from you.

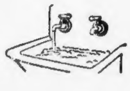
Try Chipso Granules for dishwashing, too!

Mrs. A. H.—
"Clothes smell so clean and fresh"

"I must tell you about the wonderfully clean clothes that Chipso gives me!" writes a Cambridge housewife. "White things are snowy; colored things don't fade a bit—and I simply breathe in their fresh pure cleanness when I hang them to dry! Now that we have Chipso Granules to eliminate suds-making, washday is one of my easiest, pleasantest days!"

Mrs. C. C. E.—
"Those soapy suds are wonderful"

"The instant suds that I get with Chipso Granules are an invitation to wash everything in sight!" writes an East Boston user. "My washings are bigger each week, because I pop in so many extra things—blankets, draperies! Yet even big washings are easy, because Chipso suds soak out the dirt."



Mrs. L. M.—
"Chipso is easy on my hands!"

"I use Chipso for all washing and cleaning," writes a Cambridge woman. "Wouldn't use anything else, because it treats my hands so considerately! The salesman told me Chipso was best for washing machines; and for that I use the flakes. On the other hand, I couldn't wash dishes now without Chipso Granules!"

FANNING

Folks, Meet Jim Maloney as He Really Is, Not ↕ Fellow Whom You Had Impression He Was, Perhaps

Poet and Puncher, Throwback of Warrior Bard

"If you can take a little brawn
And add a little brain,
And learn to move your hands and feet
And take a little pain;
If you can take the challenge up
From men as big as you,
And let the other peaceful folks
Do what they want to do.

"If you can do your level best
And no more mind the cheers
Than all the boohs that frequently
Are bound to reach your ears;
If you can win and shut your mouth
And lose and do the same,
And know that fighting fair's the thing,
And fame is only fame.

"If you can learn to battle on Until you've lost or won,
And then to drop the gloves and find
A little wholesome fun;
If you can take the gold you get
And build a fireside,
And leave the fighting out of doors,
And only peace inside.

"If you can meet so many folks
You'll never know by name,
And understand that lots of them
Are friendly just the same;
If you can take your ups and downs
And live life decently,
You'll thank your lucky stars and know
How rich one's life can be."

That, friend fans, is Jim Maloney's homely creed, written by himself. A fighter who sits down with those thoughts must be "a little bit of all right." We have heard a lot of things about Jim, good, bad and indifferent. Perhaps like others we sometimes have misunderstood him. You have to get under a fellow's skin to understand him. We got under Jim Maloney's skin last evening. What we found makes us know that no matter what happens Jimmy Maloney isn't going to do anything that will not be a credit to the good Irish blood that flows in his veins, to the "game" and to that little family for which he took the gold he got.

And only peace inside."

We have known and been intimate with many great fighters and fighting men. As we write interviews with them crowd in on our memory. John L. Sullivan in a stuffy six by eight dressing room of a theater in Brooklyn, painted, rouged ladies of the burlesque stage calling him "Dad" and stopping and telling him their troubles and the gruff old warrior giving out fatherly advice and admonitions to "stay off the stuff and go straight."

George Underwood

Jim Corbett in the club car of the Twentieth Century blazing its way through the night and Jim keeping us all laughing with his humorous anecdotes and stories.

Bob Fitzsimmons in front of the bar at the old Hotel Bartholdi in New York, the "interviewer" having to keep one hand over his glass of brown October ale for fear the irrepressible Tim Hurst was going to slip a "Micky Finn" in it. Many's the pain in the mid-section Bob Fitzsimmons and Tim Hurst gave out in front of the Bartholdi bar.

Jim Jeffries on the porch of his training quarters at Allenhurst when he was training for his championship fight with Fitzsimmons. Jeffries later amid the big pines of Rowadenna and we thinking how the wreck of the Big Fellow, who was training to meet Johnson, had changed from the herculean young giant we had seen at Allenhurst.

THE WILD BULL

Luis Firpo, the Wild Bull of the Pampas, sitting on the shore of beautiful Saratoga Lake, with the whole western sky ablaze with the colors only the Master can paint.

"Beautiful, isn't it, Luis," we remarked.

"Huh, no good!" grunted the Argentinian, who loved the Broadways of the world and was longing for the cabarets. "Country no good! Country only place for bullfrogs and donkeys!"

After that we wondered whether we better pin back our ears.

A perambulating "interview" with Jack Dempsey, the pair of us doing "road work" on the board walk at Atlantic City. We have been with Dempsey many hours. Save when asleep we never have seen him still or quiet for five minutes. The most restless and one of the most genial athletes we ever met.

Gene Tunney in a canoe on beautiful Lake Pleasant high up in the Adirondacks. With the whole ensemble calling for silence and retrospection hearing Gene belch forth words, words, words and then more words, long double-jointed words, which threatened to dislocate his tongue, words so big and long as to crowd out real thoughts behind them.

Jim Maloney didn't use any jaw breakers when we fanned with him before the fireplace last evening. He didn't talk much. You had to draw him out. But when he did talk he said something. And when he spoke of boxing, his family, his hopes, ambitions, he spoke from the heart.

Maloney is a throw back from the old Irish warrior bards, who slung harp on shoulder, girded on sword and went forth to battle. Song and fight forever are struggling in the heart of an Irishman. Every Gael is a creature of contrast.

Take old Billy Dacey who dropped in to see us not long ago. Old Billy, toughest of the toughest in the old bareknuckle days; old Bill, who gave away weight and met Jack McAuliffe, world's lightweight champion, and Nonpareil Jack Dempsey, world's middleweight champion, and who fought 91 rounds with a broken right hand.

Old Billy's hands are broken and scarred and "humped" from scores of ring battles. At some time or other both thumbs and three fingers were broken. Because of breaks the back of his hand is twice as thick as the ordinary man's.

DACEY'S FIDDLE

Yet when old Billy takes his magic violin and bow in those old, broken, gnarled hands no virtuso ever coaxed more wonderful strains from a priceless Stradivarius. Under the spell of his old fiddle the fire dies in those fighting Irish orbs and they become the eyes of a dreamer. Bill plays on and on. If you're old, the strains from Billy Dacey's fiddle carry you back in dreams of the past; if you're young they march you forward to love and conquest. Sure, Bill and his fiddle can charm the birds from off the bushes.

Like Billy Dacey, a fine, sensitive soul has Jimmy Maloney. Too fine and sensitive for a fighting man, perhaps, if he wasn't Irish and didn't have balance. Jim has learned to take the cheers and jeers in proper measure now. His homely philosophy has taught him it is "all in the game."

A friendly sort of a fellow is Jim Maloney, who knows the worth and value of a real friend. He wants to give everyone a "break" and hopes they give him a "break" too. How Jim looks at you and how he hopes you will look at his is expressed in another of his verses.

"There are people who live by fighting,
And people who live by play,
But however you earn your living,
A day is no more than a day.
And whether we live by fighting,
Or whether we live by our wit,
The span of life is so little
That we all cling tight to it.

There are things to be bought with money,
And joys to be found in health,
So we keep ourselves in condition
And try to acquire some wealth.
But if you should prefer an office
Instead of the things we do,
We feel that you know your business
And we hope your dreams come true.

And every fighter who battles,
With his hands in a pair of gloves,
Is really fighting in earnest
For something or someone he loves,
And whether he wins or loses
When the fight has come to an end
Then the tight-clenched fist relaxes
And goes reaching to a friend."

25 Harvard Gridmen Are Awarded Varsity Letter

Twenty-five members of the Harvard varsity football team who played in the Yale game have been awarded the varsity letter, and 14 players, representing the remainder of the varsity squad, have been awarded the minor "H," it was announced by the committee on the regulation of sports.

Charley Devens and Charley Cunningham, juniors, who were injured prior to the Yale contest, and unable to enter the game, were given the minor letter.

According to a recent edict of the student council, and one which was approved by the committee on regulation of sports, the entire varsity squad at the time of the Yale game was to receive either minor or major letters. The rule was carried out for the first time this year.

Concurrent with announcement of the varsity football awards, it was announced that 116 athletes were given various insignia for participation in various games.

The following members of the varsity football team who played against Yale were awarded the varsity H: James B. Baldwin '31, Malcolm Bancroft '33, Samuel L. Batchelder '31, John W. Crickard '32, Paul A. Fullam '32, J. Henry Gildea '31, Carl H. Hageman '33, Victor M. Harding '31, Arthur M. Huguley '31, Francis H. Kales '31, Edmund A. Mays '32, Vahan N. Moushegian '32, Henry M. Myerson '32, Robert S. Ogden '31, Eugene E. Record '32, C. Fred Richards '31, John F. Schereschewsky '32, George N. Talbot '32, Benjamin H. Ticknor '31, captain; William B. Trafford '32, John N. Trainer '31, T. Graydon Upton '31, Bernard D. White, W. Barry Wood '32 and C. Douglas Dillon '31, manager.

Siano Will Play on All-East Team

New York, Dec. 3—Thomas "Tony" Siano of Waltham, Fordham captain and one of the outstanding centers of the East, has accepted the invitation of Coach Andy Kerr of Colgate to play on the All-Eastern team in the annual New Year's game against the West at San Francisco.

Rowland Lauds "Shauno" Collins

Clarence Rowland, who last year managed Nashville in the Southern League, and who formerly managed the Chicago White Sox and who also was formerly an American League umpire, today expressed his pleasure over the news that Collins had been selected as manager of the Red Sox.

"I had 'Shauno' Collins in 1915-16-17-18 when I managed Chicago and he was a fine man to have on the club," said Rowland.

"He could see the viewpoint of the manager as well as the player. Whenever he complained to me when I was umpiring I always felt I had made a blunder. He was an easy fellow to handle and I am sure he will make a fine manager."

Another Vet Out for Tufts Quintet

Jack Fine, star guard of the Jumbo basketball quintet, reported for practice, leaving Charles Haner the only last year's letterman unseen.

Crowds Cheer Notre Dame Eleven at Every Station

Tucumcari, New Mexico, Dec. 3 (US)—Notre Dame, even when not playing football, continues to draw the crowds.

The various stops along the flight from Chicago to Tucson have found great delegations of the citizenry at the stations, peering through car windows, or roaring out demands for the appearance of Rockne, or Carideo, or Schwartz, Conley, Brill, Mullins and any other of the pronounceable names on the squad that is on its way to engage the Trojans of the University of Southern California on Saturday.

No matter how late or how early a station was reached, there was invariably a crowd waiting.

Rockne, who has been confined to his drawing room since the trip started, worrying over the strength of Southern California, was not on exhibition, save at Rock Island. There he emerged to exchange greetings with the relatives of Elmer Layden, one of the Four Horsemen.

Jack Gagnon Will Box Larry Johnson

Jack Gagnon, Allston heavyweight, has been signed to meet Larry Johnson, Chicago Negro heavyweight, in a ten-round semi final to the Young Stribling-Tuffy Griffith bout, which will take place at the Chicago Stadium on Dec. 12. Johnson is a terrific puncher and will give the rugged Gagnon a severe test.

One Sport Only for Boston Schoolboys

The coaches of the Boston schools will have their annual winter supper and get-together tomorrow night at the University Club. There plans will be discussed for the winter track and field season. The physical education department will insist that boys, who have taken part in football, drop competitive athletics until after Christmas.

Furthermore, no boy will be permitted to take part in more than one branch of sport this winter.

CLEVELAND BOY HERE FOR BOUT

By JACK CONWAY

Johnny Risko today roared into Boston in rare fighting form for his 10-round bout with Jim Maloney, which will be staged at the Boston Garden on Friday night for the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American.

Risko came to the Hub from his camp on the shores of Lake Erie. He has been roughing it for three weeks and says he is in the best condition of his career. The Cleveland socker will top off his training with strenuous workouts at Kelley & Hayes' Gym on Hanover st.

Jack Conway

I asked Risko what he thought about his meeting with Maloney.

"I'll knock Maloney out, as I did when we fought in Cleveland," said Risko. "He has a china chin, and I'll crack it wide open with driving left hooks and smashing right-hand punches.

"Maloney received a decision over me when we met for the first time in Boston. I felt I won on that occasion, but I didn't end up with the award. I was tickled when I got an opportunity to mingle with Maloney in Cleveland. I went right out for a knockout at the gong and had Shamus bundled up on the canvas in a couple of heats.

"I don't think Maloney is a bit better fighter than he was the night I knocked him out.

"I am in better condition for Friday night's bout than I have been in for some time. I have been roughing it at a camp on the shores of Lake Erie. I feel strong enough to lick a room full of Maloneys right now."

Large Sums Placed on Risko to Win

There has been a sudden switch to Risko in the betting. The odds have tightened up to 10 to 9 on Maloney. Large sums of money are available on Risko at this price. It is likely that betting will be at even money when the rival mitt wielders breeze into action.

I talked with a dozen prominent bettors today. I was surprised when I found each of them was playing Risko to win.

"Risko always wins when the other fellow is a favorite," said one bettor. "Johnny is also in splendid condition. He knows that victory means a $50,000 shot with Sharkey or Carnera and he intends to get this big prize."

There is tremendous interest in the Garden bout. With popular prices of from 50 cents to $3 it is expected that there will be 19,000 persons on hand when the rival heavyweights swing into action.

The Christmas Fund committee established the low prices for this show as it felt everybody should be offered an opportunity to witness this outstanding match.

The advance sale has passed the $5000 mark and a gate of $25,000 looks likely.

Maloney to End Training Today

Maloney will end his heavy training today. Shamus is in the same fine condition he was for his victory over Primo Carnera and says he will punch it out with Risko. Jim is anxious to win by a knockout.

"I notice Risko is squawking about the size of the gloves," said Large Dan Carroll. "Let him bring on his own gloves if he wishes. Maloney will knock him cold no matter what kind of gloves he wears."

M'Fayden and Gaston Stars of Red Sox Hurling Staff

SOMERVILLE BOY RANKS NEAR TOP

By JOE CASHMAN

The official American League pitching records for the past season make it clear why so many club-owners are now dickering for the services of Milton Gaston and Danny MacFayden, star right-handers of the Red Sox staff.

Last in the standings and last in batting, the Fenway flock finished third in pitching, because of the remarkable work of these two flingers.

Joe Cashman

Only Washington and Philadelphia, the top two clubs at the finish, had better mound records than the natives, thanks to MacFayden and Gaston, with a bit of assistance from Horace Lisenbee.

In games won and lost, neither of the Sox aces are very high in the standing, but in the earned-run column, which alone tells the story of a pitcher's real worth, both stand out.

Gaston took part in 38 games, pitched 20 complete games, won 13 and lost 20, and his earned run average was only 3.92 a game, which is less than the mark of the Washington staff, the best in the league.

Deacon Danny Won 11 and Lost 14 Games

Deacon Daniel MacFayden of Somerville, who spends his winters coaching hockey and talking from church pulpits, took part in 36 games, pitched 18 complete games, won 11 and lost 14, and permitted only 4.20 runs per game, which is a better mark than was turned in by any staff except the Senators.

There were no no-hit or one-hit games during the year and Gaston turned in one of the four three-hit games pitched. Strangely enough, Ed Morris, who was useless to the Sox for most of the season, hurled one of the other two three-hit games, and Charles Ruffing, who was a Sox at the start of the season, came through with the other two after going to the Yanks.

MacFayden led the field in three-hit games, turning in three of them, while Gaston hurled two. Gaston pitched two shutouts and MacFayden one.

With a last place club, these two young men performed as many great feats as any of the aces on the leading teams. With strong support, each should be close to invincible.

Next to Gaston and MacFayden, Lisenbee was the most effective of the Sox pitchers. Then came Durham, Russell and Smith in the order named.

The best pitcher in almost every respect in the circuit, of course, was Lefty Grove of the Athletics. He had the best earned run average of exactly three per game, appeared in most games, 50, and had the best won and lost record, winning 28 and losing only five.

Savoldi to Continue Playing With Bears

Chicago, Dec. 3 (AP)—"Jumping Joe" Savoldi, the former Notre Dame star, will keep on playing with the Chicago Bears of the National Professional football league.

Although the bears were fined $1000 for alleged violation of the league rule prohibitioing the employment of a college player until his class is graduated, the Bear management said they would keep playing him. They have appealed the case to the league's board executives.

Bowser Fires Opening Gun in Threatened Wrestling War

By RINGSIDE

Paul Bowser fired his opening gun in the threatened wrestling war in Boston when he signed Joe Stecher, former world's heavyweight champion, to meet Jack Wagner of Providence in a finish bout, best two falls out of three, at the new Boston Arena on a week from tomorrow night.

Stecher, scissors king, recently returned from a triumphant tour of Australia.

Wagner has scored wins over Joe Malcewicz, Stanley Stasiak and Count Zarynoff.

Bob (Bibber) McCoy, former Holy Cross star, will return to the local wrestling wars in the semi-final bout. He will have John Grandovich as an opponent.

Strangler Lewis, another former world's wrestling king, is also home from a trip to Australia. He has posted $5000 with the Californian Athletic Commission for a bout with Jim Londos. Lewis has agreed to donate his end of the purse to the unemployed in Los Angeles. Lewis has six wins to his credit over Londos and apparently believes he can beat Jim again.

Fabiana to Hold Mat Shows at Garden

Ray Fabiana, Philadelphia wrestling promoter, has closed a deal to promote wrestling shows at the Boston Garden. Fabiana's agreement with the local organizations is expected to be ratified at a meeting of the Garden directors on Friday.

Fabiana promoted several shows in Mechanic Building last winter, with Dick Shikat as his feature performer.

Bowser will continue to operate at the Arena, and says he will have Sonnenberg, McLeod, Lewis, Stecher, McCoy, Stasiak, Zarynoff, Wagner, George, and a long list of others signed to three-bout contracts.

Jim Murphy Will Captain Fordham

New York, Dec. 3 (INS)—Jim Murphy, halfback, was elected captain of Fordham's 1931 football team at a meeting of letter men.

Murphy, a junior, hails from Biddeford, Me. He did his best work this season in the last game, with Bucknell, when he got loose for several long runs. He was mentioned on several All-Eastern elevens.

Rosenbloom in No-Contest Bout

St. Louis, Dec. 2 (AP)—A 10-round bout between Maxie Rosenbloom, light heavyweight champion, and Paul Swiderski, Syracuse, N. Y., was stopped in the seventh round tonight by Seneca Taylor, Missouri boxing commissioner, who disqualified Swiderski and called the bout "no contest." Taylor said he would hold up Swiderski's purse for his unsatisfactory showing.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

Indoor miniature golf is not big golf moved into a warm place for the winter. Miniature golf is an entirely new home-developed game. It resembles golf putting, but is not regulation golf putting. In some ways it is better than regulation putting, and possibly more interesting. It imposes hazards in putting, and hazards are no part of out-door putting. It also requires a more delicate putting stroke because the putting surface offers virtually no resistance. Any doubt of the continuing popularity of indoor golf, at least through this season, appears to have been dispelled by the crowded play over the vest-pocket layouts, both in big cities and small. The game has taken. It is trick golf in a way, in which respect it improves over the old indoor putting course. With a good aim, a good putting stroke and a good sense of proportions, one can derive a very considerable interest at indoor play. The game calls for all these, and really becomes a game when you apply them.

Runyon's Attack on Grid Set-Ups Is Indorsed

New York, Dec. 3—I am highly honored to find an editorial writer in one of our powerful public prints taking up the cudgels with me on the proposition of the football "set-up."

If you are, as I hope and trust, an omniverous reader of this tower of truth, you will recall that I recently let out a few distinct yips to the effect that the practice of some of our big football teams in taking on early season "pop-overs," or "hit-outs," as we say in the fight lodge, is most wicked, reprehensible, baneful, and all that.

Damon Runyon

I pointed out that while our sports scribes are quick to denounce a match in which a good fighter is taking on an obvious "set-up," the football experts pass unnoticed a bout between a high class outfit and an opponent that couldn't give it a tough game of pinochle, let alone football.

I proclaimed the beautiful altruistic thought that the football teams ought to all be classified according to their strength, and that no team should be permitted to play an opponent palpably far above or below its strength. In so proclaiming, I did not, of course, expect to ever see this come to pass, nor did I expect any support for my idea. But, lo, and behold! here is an editorial bloke backing up my line of thought.

Some Grid Games Worse Than Ring Set-Ups

My contention about this equal division of strength was—and still is—based on the idea of preventing, as far as possible, some of man's inhumanity to man. When a big league football team is in there with a "push-over," it cannot be expected to handle the "pushover" with kid gloves.

The match was made in the first place with the same idea on which a champion is matched with what we call a "sucker," in the elegant parlance of the ring, said idea in both cases being to flatten the chump as speedily as possible.

It isn't so bad in fighting, because the fistic "sucker" is educated by experience on nature in his calling, and he rarely dies a lingering death. He goes on about his business expeditiously and sometimes graciously.

But the football "set-up" doesn't always know he is a "set-up," and being young and enthusiastic, he stays in there and takes it as long as he is conscious. A bad business, I say, and unworthy of our big college football teams.

It is my contention that when one team has rolled up a big score early in the game and there is obviously no chance of the other team catching up, the officials ought to call it off, just as a referee often stops a fight because one of the gladiators is totally outclassed.

But do I expect to see anything come of my contention?

Don't be silly!

7 MINOR LEAGUE PLAYERS FINED

Montreal, Que., Dec. 3 (INS)—Seven minor league players were fined $10 each today by the board of arbitration at the convention of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues because they played exhibition games against a Racine (Wis.) team this fall.

The players fined were John Kloza and George Gerken of Milwaukee, Edgar Holley of Kansas City, Fred Bedore of Toronto, Harry Strohnm of Little Rock, Stanley Lewan of Hazelton, Pa., and Edward Tesmer of Dallas.

The arbitration board also reversed its decision in the salary claim of Lloyd G. Davis against the Providence club and disallowed the claim. New evidence was introduced which caused the board to change its mind and rule against the player.

Conlan Traded to Montreal for Elam Van Gilder

Montreal, Dec. 3—Jocko Conlan, outfielder with the Toledo club of the American Association, was traded today to the Montreal club of the International League for Elam Van Gilder, veteran right-hand pitcher.

Van Gilder was formerly with the Detroit Tigers and the St. Louis Browns. He came to the Montreal Royals in 1929 and late in the 1930 season he was sent to Toledo on option.

Bruins Begin to Show Flashes of Last Year's Form

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

LOCALS PLAY QUAKERS ON FRIDAY

By BILL GRIMES

The Bruins showed flashes of their last season's form in their 3-to-2 victory over the Toronto Maple Leafs at the Garden.

The first line, Galbraith, Barry and Oliver, is still the same old stand-by, doing its work effectively but without any frills.

Bill Grimes

Against Toronto, Manager Art Ross played Smoky Harris on the second line during most of the substitutions. Harris has been going well all season and is deserving of his promotion and will soon smooth out his work to such an extent as to be a top notcher.

Another newcomer who is showing noticeable improvement weekly is Art Chapman. Chappie is a goal getter and with the proper support of a good pair of wings, would show to far better advantage.

Until the Bruins leave for their first encounter with the Philadelphia Quakers on Friday night, daily practise sessions will be held with the hopes of acquiring more smoothness in their combination play which has been spotty up to the present.

Toronto Manager Seeks Player of Owen Type

"If I can pick up a player of the George Owen type," said Connie after the battle with the Bruins, "I'll take my chances with any team in the N. H. L., with only one spare forward line and two extra defense men."

In all probability, Connie Smythe knows what he is doing but with a 44 game schedule of the rugged brand of hockey now being played in the N. H. L., it is quite an undertaking for eleven men.

At present the Maple Leafs are carrying just three spare forwards, two extra defense men and two goalies.

"There is no reason why a player cannot carry on for at least 30 minutes per game. If they can't go for that length of time, I don't want them" continued Connie.

That is all very fine when things are breaking right for a team. Any player should be able to give his best for half a game but what will happen to the Leafs if one or two of their crew is disabled, which is more common in hockey than in almost any branch of sport.

Toronto would be sadly handicapped should any one of its forwards be forced out of action by injury or illness.

For instance, last night, Charlie Conacher just missed seriously injuring his left wrist when he fell in the last period. The loss of Conacher would cripple the Leafs badly, for Connie is the top scorer and one of the real sparks of the team.

The Toronto club has thirty-six games to play and even if Manager Smythe manages to corral a player of the George Owen type, which is not found hanging on bushes, it cannot hope to be at top strength for every contest. As soon as its ranks are thinned out, the Leafs are going to slip out of the running.

Tigers and Reds Battle Tonight

The Boston Tigers will meet the championship Providence Reds tonight at Providence.

Despite the recent losses of the Tigers, Manager Eddie Powers feels that his club has a chance to win tonight's contest against Sprague Cleghorn's clan. In the first game between the Bostons and the Reds, the Providence team won, 4 to 2, but they were aided in no small measure by the off night which Hal Winkler had in the Tiger nets. Hal is too good a goalie to make a habit of such playing.

Powers will use the same line-up which faced New Haven at the Garden Saturday. Foster, star defence man, though back on skates, will not be used, and Guy McNeill, whose play against the Eagles was outstanding, will partner Captain Reg Mackey on the defence.

MAPLE LEAFS FALL

Passing the Puck

By BILL GRIMES

Judging from his officiating last night, George Mallinson should not be assigned to any Bruins' games until such a time as he has had an opportunity to collect himself. George was far below form last evening and it is a question which team was the worst sufferer. Both were handed out some weird decisions.

Mallinson did not have the right slant on the Shore-Conacher mix-up in the first period. True, Shore charged over to the wing to stop Connie and his action may have warranted a minor penalty. But Conacher brought his stick down on the top of the Bruin's head and was entitled to draw a major. They were both given minors.

Incidentally, Eddie Shore was badly pummeled during the opening period. The Leafs went after Shore from the first face-off, and the game was hardly begun when Eddie was obliged to retire for a "Win Green treatment."

Soon after the Conacher jam King Clancy nailed Shore while carrying down the left wing and knocked the Boston star for a loop.

Another Mallinson decision which did not ring true was the calling back of Hal Cotton, who took a pass from Andy Blair in the second period and had the Bruin defense beaten. Cotton was in the center zone when the puck went over the blue line, and the whistle was not blown until Cotton was inside the Boston outer defense and made a clean shot at Thompson.

One of the largest crowds of the season witnessed the contest which was a thriller all the way, and exceptionally fast and rugged for two periods.

Due to the failure of the fans to purchase their tickets beforehand, hundreds were milling around the lobby trying to secure ducats when the battle started.

Capt. Lionel Hitchman lost no time putting a heavy body check on "Ace" Bailey. Hitch landed his prey early in the first period and Bailey was severely jarred. For some minutes he was unable to get up any great amount of speed.

Either the pucks are harder or the boys are shooting with more speed, for Tiny Thompson had no less than six large black and blue marks on his legs at the end of the melee. Tiny is going to sacrifice some of his speed for more protection by wearing heavier pads in the future.

It remained for the Montreal Maroons to give the Chicago Blackhawks their first setback of the season. The Hawks had burnt up the league until the mauling Maroons set them back on their haunches last night in the Forum.

Try and get a seat for the Bruin-Maroon tilt next Tuesday night at the Garden.

King Clancy is a human dynamo. He was on the go and traveling at top speed every second he was on the ice. Connie Smythe has a pair of smart defense men in Clancy and Happy Day, and the rest of his team is very agile hopping upon loose pucks.

Sharkey Offered $200,000 for Bout With Carnera

Jack Sharkey, American heavyweight champion, has been offered $200,000 by Renato Gardini, representing a group of New York Italians, for a 15-round bout with Primo Carnera, which is planned to be staged in New York next June for several Italian charities.

Gardini says Carnera's suspension in New York will probably be lifted in May and that big Primo can then mingle with Sharkey.

Johnny Buckley, Sharkey's manager, has taken Gardini's offer under consideration.

Italian Team Leads in Six-Day Bike Race

New York, Dec 3 (INS). At the 60th hour today the Italian cycling team of Pietro Linari and Alfredo Binda held the advantage in the annual international six-day bike race at Madison Square Garden, although they were tied in laps by two other teams, Spencer-Debaets and the other Italian combination of Georgetti-Brocardo.

Humorist Tells of "Meanest Job"

Among the royal rooters accompanying the Notre Dame eleven to the Coast, where the Irish play U. S. C. on Saturday, is J. P. McAvoy, the humorist, who is an old Notre Dame man.

He and Rockne were exchanging reminiscences of their school days, and got on the subject of working their way through school.

"I," said McAvoy, "had the most menial job. Lots of boys waited on table. I was the student who waited on the waiters."

REVERE MAY JOIN SUBURBAN

Revere High will be a member of the Suburban League before long if an expected invitation is issued by the league to Revere to join the circuit.

Officials of Revere high school would be glad to join the league, in the hope that their capable grid teams, coached by Bob O'Keefe, would get stronger competition.

A Suburban League meeting will be held soon, and it is likely that an invitation to join the league will follow the gathering.

Revere's entrance would make the league a six-team group, provided Somerville remains a member. It has been rumored that Somerville would withdraw from the league this year, but now it is thought that Somerville will remain in the league as in past years.

The Quick, Brilliant Story of a Strange Love Triangle

Logan Acts as Wilda Becomes Flighty

HOW THE STORY STARTS

Wilda Gardner, bookkeeper in a hardware store, is in love with Logan Townsend, who "has not spoken yet."

He is no Adonis, Wilda thinks, but he has a rare smile. This smile also attracts Bess Avery, a stenographer in an office near Logan's. Wilda's mother, Garcie, has been strangely distracted since the father died. He is understood to have left much money and she plans to leave the poor little cottage in which they live in Boston and get in touch with a richer life. Logan takes Myrtle to the party and Wilda assumes gaiety she does not feel.

By MAY CHRISTIE

(Copyright 1930.)

LOGAN MORE than liked her. He had cherished a certain feeling of romance about her lately.

What, then, had happened at their last meeting that had been so unsatisfactory? Was it Wilda's lack of interest in his hobby? Or her mother's springing the news about their legacy. Or their proposed trip to Europe.

Darned if he knew.

Anyhow, all in a moment, as it were, he found himself booked to escort Myrtle—instead of Wilda—to the party.

"Look at Wilda Gardner's face—painted like a clown—all set and ready for the footlights!" giggled Myrtle, in her astonishment at Wilda's transformation, entirely forgetting her own role of sweet naiveness.

"Here's to Crime!"

Wilda Too Vociferous

Logan swung round. Coral had fetched them into the house on some pretext. They were near the punch-bowl, and as he glanced at Wilda he saw the latter standing right beside the "bar," laughing, and waving her glass hilariously.

A new Wilda, indeed! Even in the artificial light he saw her cheeks were over-rouged . . . and surely those striking blue shadows round her eyes were not natural. There was a hardness in her face and on the scarlet lips that matched the bright red of her dress. A little group of men were clustered about her. Now, when she held up her glass to them, as though in challenge, there seemed an unsteadiness about her.

"Here's to crime," she was declaiming idiotically, in answer to some remark by one of the men. A lock of her immaculately brushed hair had fallen over her forehead, lending a sort of shaggy look to her usual good grooming.

"She's had too many drinks," commented Myrtle, casting her eyes down in assumed modesty and trying to look like a startled faun. "It's such a pity, for at heart Wilda's a perfect well-meaning girl—"

Logan waited to hear no more. With a quick excuse to his partner, despite his injured ankle in two strides he was over to the punch bowl.

Called Her Out

Wilda Followed Him

"Can I speak to you a minute, Wilda?"

The girl turned her eyes with the blue shadows laid so thickly about them on the young man.

"Unload! Stay with me!"

"Won't you come out for a minute to the garden?"

She shrugged her shoulders, quite in a prima donna manner.

"I'm booked knee-deep in dances. Howsoever, if you insist—"

She put a hand on his arm and smiled uncertainly up at him.

"She's tight," exclaimed Myrtle vindictively to the nearest bystander.

But no one paid any heed to Myrtle. They were looking after the two departing figures.

"Great girl, Wilda! She'll have a wonderful time in Europe."

"You betcha."

"Yep. You said it."

"And oceans of decent booze, too."

"Say, she's lit up already—"

Coral appeared in time to catch the last phrase.

"Why—Wilda."

"Wilda lit up? Nothing of the sort. Not more than anybody else. You're a pack of mean old gossipers."

The little group broke up. Myrtle alone stood hesitant.

Why on earth had she been such a fool as to deliberately

EAST BOSTON PROJECT IS UNDER WAY

Razing of Buildings by Alleged Non-Residents Brings Strong Protest

About 100 unemployed men gathered at the intersection of Porter and Havre sts., East Boston, today as work began for the $16,000,000 vehicle tunnel under the harbor.

Thirty employes of the New York Building Wrecking Co. of Roxbury began tearing down the three-family tenements at 49 to 63 Porter st. and 164-168 Havre st.

The unemployed, claiming to be residents of the district for periods ranging up to 35 years, protested to Samuel Kanter, in charge of the workmen, that none of them were residents of East Boston.

They also charged that many of the workmen were not citizens, but were told that a city official had already made an investigation and found no aliens on the list.

There was no demonstration but much grumbling. The razing of the houses, about 12 in number, will take 30 days, and actual boring of the tunnel is planned to start Jan. 8.

Mercury Rises Six Degrees in Hour

Boston warmed up today—six degrees in one hour—with indications of continued rises in temperature tomorrow. After readings below 20 during the early hours, the glass reached that mark at 7 and 8 o'clock, then jumped to 26 above at 9 a. m.

Tomorrow will be fair and warmer. Outside areas suffered during the night with temperatures down toward the zero mark. Burlington recorded 6, Lexington 7 and Bedford and Concord 9 degrees each.

Accused Chicken Thief Shot Down

Frederick Stanhope of Chestnut st., Lynn, was seriously wounded today at Londonderry, N. H., according to a message to Lynn police, by a shot from the gun of A. M. Park, Londonderry poultry raiser. Londonderry police said they have charged Stanhope with attempted larceny of chickens and have placed a guard at his bed in Brentwood hospital, Epping, N. H. Two other men escaped.

AMONG THOSE women in our society who have had to face about abruptly when incomes were restricted, there is a fine sporting spirit. It is going to be a good thing for all of us to go back to simpler, more wholesome living than prevailed during the period of easy money just passed.

MRS. STEPHEN P. HURD

We can go on entertaining just as cheerfully and cordially as before if we return to the ideals of our forefathers to extend instant hospitality and share what we have with our guests. This sort of hospitality seems to have almost disappeared in prosperous American homes.

We have been so lavish in our spending that any curtailment drives many to the other extreme. Anyone can give Christmas gifts, for example, if he is ready to put something of himself into the gift and not merely make a display of the cost of the gift in money. We are going to be more careful to get value for money expended, and if every merchant understands this it will hasten the co-operation between stores and the consumer.

The majority of Boston stores are to be congratulated on their fine spirit of being willing to exchange articles when they are not what the customer expected.

I think that women appreciate such co-operation on the part of the merchants, more, and less costly, mutual services are possible

MAYOR MOVES TO SPEED UP NEW SCHOOL

Requests School Committee to Decide on Site for New Girls' High Building

The Boston School Committee was today requested to decide upon a site for the new Girls High School by Mayor Curley.

The mayor pointed out that this matter must be agreed upon before the school building program for 1931 is presented to the Legislature early in 1931.

The mayor also pointed out that immediate action on the matter would cause early construction of the building and would do much to assist the unemployed.

For some time past the committee has been deadlocked on the question of a site. Some members favor a site in [illegible] while others believe that the school should be built in W. Newton or South End [illegible] the present [illegible] building.

[illegible] stated that he favors a site in the vicinity of Grove Hall because of the large number of high school pupils who reside in that vicinity.

The company was petitioned into bankruptcy November 1 and later reported assets of $452,350, and liabilities of $508,503.

$50 Weekly for News and Picture Tips

Do you want to get money for being alert? If so, the Boston Evening American offers the opportunity. Each week $50 in prizes will be given for news and picture tips telephoned in to the News-Tip Editor, at Liberty 4000.

And what is a news tip? It's the information that something of interest to Greater Bostonians has taken place or will take place. Do you know, for instance, that an interesting picture is to be obtained, that an accident or an unusual event has happened, that there is going to be a business merger? That's a news tip. If you have a camera, take a picture of some news event, while it is happening. Pictures of unusual animal poses are wanted, too. Bring your action pictures to the American quick. Delay often spoils them for use in the American.

There will be $15 given weekly for the best or an unusual event news tip received; $10 for the next best; $5 for the next best, and $2 prizes for each of the 10 next most valuable tips. Of course, the first one who turns in the tip in an interesting event receives the award on that particular item. Anyone who is alive and alert can win.

TEACHER LOSES OUSTER FIGHT

Mrs. Della H. Clifford, former Lynn teacher who was discharged in 1927 and has been fighting for reinstatement ever since, lost her battle today by a decision of Judge Crosby in Supreme Court.

The outcome is a surprise, inasmuch as both sides had agreed she should be restored. Judge Crosby ruled, however, that as she is now a member of the school committee, her petition for a writ of mandamus must be denied.

Mrs. Clifford ran for the school committee in 1927 as one of her steps toward forcing the committee to reinstate her as a teacher, and she has been a member ever since.

Expecting a favorable decision from the court, she planned to resign as soon as it was handed down so she would be free to resume her former position. There is nothing to prevent her reappointment as a teacher, but she wanted restoration by the court so that she might collect lost pay amounting, it is said, to approximately $3000.

BURGLAR ROBS 2 STUDENTS

Two students in a Beacon st., Back Bay, rooming house were awakened by a burglar early today, forced at gunpoint into a closet and robbed.

The intruder escaped, taking with him $5 in cash, a watch, a black leather traveling bag and clothing valued at $75.

The robbery occurred on the fourth floor of the lodging house. Granville Moat was awakened by a noise and found the burglar standing over him with a pistol. George Weeks, another student roomer, then was aroused and both were forced into a closet.

Warning the two youths not to make an outcry, the burglar leisurely collected his loot and departed.

TWELVE DRIVEN OUT INTO COLD BY FIRE IN SO. END APARTMENT

POLICEMEN LEAD THEM TO SAFETY

Occupants of the Four-Story Building Have to Flee in Nightclothes

Fire in an apartment house at 3 Union Park, South End, filled the four-story building with smoke early today and drove 12 tenants, including three small children, attired only in night clothing, to the street.

Patrolman John V. Miller who discovered the fire and Patrolmen William Rush and William J. Murphy aroused the occupants and led them to safety.

Fire officials say the blaze started in a defective chimney and shot up through the building until the entire four floors were filled with flames and billowing clouds of smoke.

The occupants of the house were taken to the East Dedham st. station, where they were provided with warm clothing as well as food and coffee.

Patrolman Miller aroused Mrs. Gertrude Hopkins, 22, and her two children, Gertrude, 4, and Mary, 1. The little girl, Mary, was carried out by the officer.

Among those aroused by the other officers were Robert Rhoades and his wife, Helen, Thomas Wingate, 23, and his wife Elizabeth, 22, and their two-year-old son, Thomas, William O'Connell, 21, and three others whose names were not learned.

Damage was estimated at $5000.

ALIEN 'GUNMAN' IS SENTENCED

Antonio Fabrizio, owner of a Revere shack where one of five boys was injured by buckshot from a gun set to prevent burglary, was sentenced to 60 days in the House of Correction today in Chelsea court for illegal use of firearms.

Fabrizio is not an American citizen, according to police. He arrived here from Italy in 1923.

The wounds of James O'Donnell of Sargent st., Revere, were reported to police by four companions of his who told of the discharge of the gun as they sought to open the shack door. The five were charged with breaking and entering and will appear in court tomorrow.

Fabrizio told police he rigged up the gun as a guard against theft of alcohol. He pleaded guilty, but appealed.

Crooker Complaint Studied by Warner

A complaint by Conrad W. Crooker of the Liberal Civic League that the report of campaign expenditures by the Republican state committee is a violation of the corrupt practice act in that it records a loan of $50,000 to the committee by the American Trust Co. was yesterday referred by Secretary of State Cook to Atty.-Gen. Warner for consideration.

The attorney-general had no comment to make on the matter last night.

Swindler Escapes With Cafe Receipts

A well dressed man about 40 years old after telephoning the Waldorf restaurant in Salem shortly before the restaurant closed at 1:30 this morning, was admitted to the store by the acting night manager and after sending the manager down stairs to check the stock, went to the cash register and emptied it of about $200.

Willis Hilmes, the night assistant manager of the cafe, chased the swindler for several blocks but was outdistanced.

The Boston Society of Architects last night went on record as approving in principle the Boston thoroughfare plan submitted by the city planning board, and indorsed specifically the improvements planned for the first construction period, which includes the Central Artery.

Water Main Bursts

A 40-inch watermain burst under Clinton rd., Brookline, near the Runkle School, today, but the water bubbling through the pavement was noticed so quickly that the water was shut off before serious damage was caused.

A hunting party in Africa recently captured a wild boy who ran on all fours, climbed trees, and fought and bit savagely when caught. Later it was discovered that this boy was carried off by a baboon when a baby, 13 years before. Read the story of this strange adventure in the jungle which appears in the next Boston Sunday Advertiser in the American Weekly section.

CONNOLLY CASE PROBE ON

The state board of arbitration and conciliation today continued its scrutiny of the records of the Boston Central Labor Union in connection with the controversy between labor officials and the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co. over the discharge of Miss Margaret I. Connolly, telephone operator.

Edward Fisher, chairman of the board, stated that every possible avenue of conciliation would be used by the board in an effort to settle the difficulty before reporting to the Governor for fixing of blame.

WOMAN HELD IN RUM CASE

Wine was sold for 50 cents a pitcher and diluted spirits of alcohol retailed at $2 a pint in the back room of the street floor at 16 ; S. Margin st., West End district, it was testified by Agent John Griffin of the prohibition force in federal court today.

Theresa Scalia, occupant of the apartment, was before Commissioner Jenney on a charge of violation of the national prohibition act. She was represented by Atty. Herbert F. Callahan. She pleaded not guilty and was held in $500.

O'CONNELL HITS WORLD COURT PROPAGANDA

Turns Plea That He Influenced Senator Walsh Into Boomerang

What was intended as a move to enlist the aid of former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell in influencing Senator David I. Walsh and Senator Frederick H. Gillett to help in ratifying the World Court protocols proved a decided boomerang, it was learned today.

The attempt was made by the American Foundation, in a letter over the signature of Esther Everett Lape, "Member in Charge."

In the letter, the American Foundation requested ex-Congressman O'Connell, "if you are interested in completing the adherence of the United States to the World Court," to write to Senators Walsh and Gillett, expressing his (O'Connell's) interest in ratification.

"You do not need to be told that Mr. Gillett will do everything he can to bring about early ratification of the protocols," the letter said.

"VICIOUS PROPAGANDA"

Instead of writing as requested however, the former Congressman sent letters to Senators Walsh and Gillette in an entirely different vein.

Characterizing the American Foundation letter as "about as vicious and contemptible a piece of propaganda as has ever been attempted," O'Connell declared to Senator Walsh that:

"It is very evident that there was some advance information given to this organization as to the policy to be pursued."

LETTER TO GILLETT

To Senator Gillett, the former Congressman wrote:

"From this (the American Foundation letter), I note that these people feel that they are assured of your support. It is stated clearly in the letter that I need not be told that you will do everything you can to bring about early ratification of the protocols.

"May I be permitted to state to you that I am very sorry to know that these people are in a position to speak for you in this manner." From my rather wide experience—during the last year, particularly—in canvassing this Commonwealth, I am firmly of the opinion that the people of Massachusetts are, in an overwhelming majority, opposed to the entry of the United States into the so-called World Court and, speaking not only for myself but in behalf of a vast number of people all over this Commonwealth, I hope you will consider our opposition and not be misled by the intensive propaganda."

ACCUSED POLICE TO GET HEARING

Capt. William Livingston of City sq. station, Charlestown, indicated today he intends to take no action in the case of Patrolman Neil J. Henderson prior to the court hearing Friday on a charge of assault and battery against the policeman.

Henderson is accused by Francis Galvin of Washington st., Charlestown, of being one of four men in civilian clothes who beat up him and three companions on Union st. early Sunday morning. Galvin picked Henderson from a lineup.

Henderson, a night officer on various routes, has not been suspended.

It is understood testimony about drinking will be given when the case is heard Friday in Charlestown district court. Mary E. Smith, clerk of the court, issued the complaint after hearing Galvin's story, but refused to issue a complaint charging robbery.

Henderson denies any part in the attack.

SIX MAYORS IN BAY STATE ARE RE-ELECTED

Ashley Wins in New Bedford, McGrath in Quincy; Talbot Loses Fall River

Six mayors of Massachusetts cities were re-elected to office, one for his 25th term, and new leaders were chosen by three other cities, according to returns today from the nine cities.

Four other cities voted for minor officials yesterday, the feature of which was the defeat of "Bossy" Gillis candidates for council in Newburyport.

Charles H. Ashley, mayor of New Bedford, was returned to office for his 25th term and will start his 27th year in that office in 1931.

TALBOT LOSES

Thomas J. McGrath of Quincy, J. Leo Sullivan of Peabody, William T. Dillon of Holyoke, John E. Parker of Gloucester and Forrest V. Smith of Haverhill were the other mayors re-elected.

Councilman Daniel F. Sullivan of Fall River was the surprising winner in that city, defeating Mayor Edmond P. Talbot for re-election.

LIGHT VOTE

Mayor McGrath's election was after a close contest with Russell T. Bates, son of the late Mayor Gustave T. Bates. Each carried three wards, but McGrath's total was 10,863 to 9533 for Bates.

Taunton, Salem, Newburyport and Leominster were the other cities holding elections. The vote was light because mayoralties were not involved.

"Bossy" Gillis' defeated candidates were James J. Ryan, William B. Catlin, John F. Robinson and John J. Groves, candidates for the city council.

ROACHES
AND WATER BUGS
KILLED
NOW IS THE TIME TO GET RID OF THEM

Liquids will kill only about 10%

Poison powders will do about the same.

There is only one sure and safe way to entirely rid the house of these pests. Roaches are night feeding bugs. They don't appear until late and then the entire family turns out for its daily meal. Feed them something they like better than ordinary food, something that is non-poisonous and does not drive them back into the walls.

TOLD TO STOP TILTS WITH WITNESSES

More "Unfair" Service Given Rival City Is Cited by the B. & M. Foreign Agent

Another tilt between Boston and New York counsel opened the rate hearing at the Chamber of Commerce today on this city's plea for equalization of rate allowances to the seaboard with those of New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore.

Johnston B. Campbell, senior counsel for Boston interests, charged Wilbur LaRoe of New York with "delaying and obstructing tactics" and objected to his arguing with Boston witnesses.

Walter E. Barrett, a Boston & Maine railroad superintendent, was testifying when the accusations started to fly.

Under cross-examination by LaRoe he answered technical rate questions and was contradicted by the New York counsel.

CHARGES GRANDSTAND PLAY

"You are trying to make a grandstand play here, but all you are doing is delaying things.

"You have a habit of obstructing things and I don't propose to stand for it."

LaRoe argued in defense, but examiners for the Interstate Commerce Commission, in charge of the hearing, called for order and warned against further outbreaks.

At one point, Atty. Campbell charged that New York interests had given orders to certain Bostonians to "lay off" the hearing. His statement came after LaRoe asked the right to call Francis J. Dowd, transportation manager of the Associated Industries, as a witness.

RAILROAD MAN ON STAND

Statements attributed yesterday to the association indicated that it was not in accord with Boston's case, and Dowd was "anticipated" as an unfriendly Boston witness.

During the noon recess, City Counsel Samuel Silverman charged in a conference with newspapermen that three of his best witnesses for Boston interests had been told by New York interests to "call off their testimony."

"We are going to smoke out the unfriendly interests in our own city here. It's time now for Boston to fight as it never fought before," he said.

Silverman refused to name the three but said the newspapermen could run down the list of Boston witnesses and find three who hadn't appeared today as expected.

Charles W. Boynton, foreign freight agent for the B. & M. Railroad, testified today that lack of steamer service through "unfair differentials" were reasons for dropping off of grain movements through the port.

He said equal rates and charges from inland points to Boston with those of the other cities would restore Boston to its position as one of the leading ports of the world.

Loses Xmas Cash

MRS. FILOMENA CIONTI of 277 Paris st., East Boston, lost her Christmas savings check of $100 to a thief who jimmied a mail box at her home and cashed the check. (Staff photo.)

There is a thief who doesn't believe in Santa Claus—or even his principles.

He stole the Christmas check for $100 mailed to Mrs. Filomena Cionti, of 277 Paris st., East Boston, by the First National Bank of Boston.

Watching the rounds of the postman for delivery of checks, the thief jimmied the mail box of Mrs. Cionti and lost no time in cashing the check.

Police today were checking with bank officials and the endorsement on the check in the hopes that the thief will spend his Christmas in jail.

EVELYN LAYE LEADING IN RACE FOR 'TRILBY' ROLE

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

(Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service.)

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 3—Evelyn Laye is leading the race for "Trilby." Jack Warner has asked Sam Goldwyn to lend his British star for the leading role opposite Jack Barrymore. If Miss Laye is willing to accept Warner Brothers' offer, the contracts will be signed while Sam is abroad. The chances are she will not turn down an offer to play opposite Mr. Barrymore.

I had a talk with Jack Warner and he said that the public's choice for "Trilby" has ranged from comediennes to prima donnas. He says such actresses as Anna Case, Rosa Raisa, Grace Moore, Eleanor Boardman and Mary Lewis are a few of the favorites suggested for the part. He said he had no idea when he purchased Gerald Du Maurier's play there would be such wide interest.

Louella O. Parsons

A little bird tells me that John Barrymore will not be starred in "The Maltese Falcon." Warner Brothers, it is true, will make it but it will be produced while "Trilby" is in production. Bebe Daniels is Warner Brothers' choice for the leading lady in "The Maltese Falcon." At least, the job has been offered her. She is now reading the script. Also Bebe has been [illegible] to play the lead in "Lonely Wives" for Pathe.

WHOM HAD W. D. BURNETT in mind when he wrote "The Iron Man" is a mooted question. Some say it's a composite picture of Gene Tunney and Jack Dempsey. Others say it's a fictional character based on no particular prize fighter. Anyway, Universal has purchased the story and it will soon be made into a motion picture. Tod Browning, who never fails to make an entertaining picture, will direct it.

PALM SPRINGS IS lovelier than ever this year. I spent the week-end trying to get rid of a cold at the Desert Inn and I couldn't help but feel how fortunate the film people are to be so close to a place where they can rest and get well when they are tired out. Sunday was like a summer day. Women in white sports suits, men coatless and hatless or in bathing suits would have made a fine picture to send back to the shivering East. Mrs. Nellie Coffman, who really pioneered Palm Springs, always gives a special welcome to the film people. Jack Warner and his Cabinet were all at the inn. There was Mrs. Warner, Jackie, Jr., the Darryl Zanucks, Hal Wallis, Louise Fazenda, Mr. and Mrs. Graham and John Santoro. John Santoro was sent to the desert to die a year ago. He has gained 60 pounds and he will tell anyone who talks to him how much Jack Warner and Darryl Zanuck did for him in sending him to Palm Springs.

MISS FRENCH GIVES RECITAL

By MOSES SMITH

Isabel French, soprano, sang at Jordan Hall last night before a good-sized audience. The program was of exceptional quality throughout. Beginning with four old airs in Italian, French and German, it included five German lieder, a quartet of French impressionist songs and a final group so far out of the general run that it ended with the comparatively [illegible] of Respighi. Here was certainly artistic [illegible].

Most of these numbers of various schools [illegible] in one respect to type: they were quiet, musing, or wistful songs, rather than flashy or brilliant. Though the program was thereby unified, it threatened to become monotonous. From this danger it was saved by the fact that Miss French is evidently at her best in this type, and knows her limitations.

Her voice is of excellent lyric quality, and when she has a quiet phrase to deliver she can be most expressive. On the rare occasions when she sings in full voice the quality remains good, the voice unforced. Reginald Boardman played excellent accompaniments.

Argentina

Argentina is to make a second and last appearance in Boston when she dances in Symphony Hall on Wednesday evening, December 10. The great Spanish dancer will have new numbers and new costumes.

PRAYER CALL FEATURE OF 'MOROCCO'

A call heard daily in the lands where the crescent of Mohammedism is in the ascendant, is to be brought to western ears by the audible screen. It is the Muezzin's summons to prayer. His ritual has been filmed with faithful attention to authentic detail for Paramount's "Morocco," an adventure story of the Foreign Legion, featuring Gary Cooper, Marlene Dietrich and Adolphe Menjou, and opening Friday at the Uptown and Olympia.

Only the possessor of a powerful and beautiful voice may become a Muezzin, according to Jamiel Hasson, the Arabian technical advisor with the film.

It is the duty of this servant of the Prophet to call the faithful to prayer at certain periods daily. All within the sound of his ringing voice are required to enter the mosque for worship, or, if that is impossible, to kneel with their faces toward Mecca and pray.

Joseph Diskay, Hungarian tenor, was secured to chant the Muezzin's call for "Morocco." Diskay sings in 12 languages, including Arabic.

JUNE WALKER IN NEW PLAY

June Walker, who last appeared in Boston in the leading feminine role in "Waterloo Bridge," will be seen at the Tremont in the new Theatre Guild production, "Green Grow the Lilacs," in the leading role of Laurie. In this she will impersonate a wholesome and unworldly girl of the frontier days of Oklahoma—a part wholly unlike those in which she has been seen heretofore in Boston. Miss Walker is known to local theater-goers through her fine performances with Raymond Hitchcock in "Hitchy Koo"; in "Six Cylinder Love," "The Nervous Wreck" and as Lorelei Lee in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes."

June Walker

She next played the leading role in David Belasco's production of "The Bachelor Father," and last season she was co-starred with Glen Hunter in "Waterloo Bridge."

COPELAND IN JORDAN HALL RECITAL

His program is as follows: Corelli's Sarabande-Gigue; Grazioli's Adagio, Ravel's Menuet—"Le tombeau de Couperin," Bach's Jesus Christus, Filius Dei, Debussy's "La Cathedrale engloutie," "Danse de Puck," "Et la lune descend sur le temple qui fut," "La Puerta del Vino," and "Feux d'artifice"; Falla's "L'Amour Sorcier," Pittaluga's "Danza de la Hoguera," Turina's "Los bebedores de manzanilla," Mompou's "Canco i Danza No. IV," Nin's Danza No. V and "Homanaje a la jota," Lecuona's "Malaguena."

George Copeland

"The so-called modernists," says Mr. Copeland, "are not very far from Bach, 'the father of counterpoint' and the font of classicism. When I first played Bach, I played it as I was taught, in the old style, but I felt it to be ultra-modern, as we know it to be now. For Bach is Debussy, is Chopin, and all others."

4 MARX BROS. ON MET BILL

The Four Marx Brothers appear in person at the Metropolitan tomorrow, and plans are being made for the biggest week in the history of that theater.

Groucho, Beppo, Harpo and Chico will all be on stage, and their antics will be seen and heard at every performance.

No quartet of brothers has ever become quite so famous for fun-making procilivities, and their work in "Animal Crackers" and in "Cocoanuts" has stamped them as among the foremost comedians in America today. They have a brand new act, and will sing, dance, play and clown through 30 minutes of merriment.

Fashionable Furs Worn At Show

Plymouth Premiere Benefits Infants' Hospital Fund; Many Leaders Attend

APPARENTLY, FRENCH premieres did not go over so big with the society audience at the Plymouth Theater last evening when "Purity," the French play by Rene Wachthausen and adapted by Ralph Roeder, was presented for the benefit of the Infants' Hospital. The house was well filled and many well-known faces sauntered down the aisles, among them Mrs. J. Gardner Bradley and her daughter, Miss Dorothy, looking quite Garboish in jade green chiffon. Mrs. Sam Warren was in her box smothered in white furs and escorts, Frederick Cameron Church, Newell Bent and so on. One whom we will not mention looked longingly at the adjacent box, where a certain scintillating little person in gold lace and ermine wrap smiled mischievously at him.

MRS. WADSWORTH BUSK visited the Warren box and the West one also, very pretty in bright light blue with lace. Others of the young crowd were Francis Gardner, Margaret Leland, Agnes Boardman with Evelyn Royce, a debutante; Edith Wilton, quite beautiful in turquoise-moise and a wind-blown bob, Constance Bowden in conventional black with white fox collar. Mrs. Sumner Pingree was much be-minked, most becoming to her gorgeous red hair, and her charming mother, Mrs. Weld, was in garnet velvet and old lace; beautiful and Bostonesque. Mrs. Bayard Tuckerman was in sables, and conventional Mrs. Gordon Abbott, in black and white, and, as always where the elite hold forth, Mrs. Frederick Winthrop.

OTHERS WE NOTICED among the sea of faces were Mrs. Philip Stockton, Mrs. Malcolm Donald, Mrs. Edward U. Curtis, Mrs. Arthur M. Beale, Mrs. Alexander Whiteside, Mrs. Thomas Motley, Mrs. Henry Sawyer and daughter, Elizabeth, who will be presented Friday night of this week, Mrs. William Endicott, Mrs. Harry Greenough, Mrs. S. V. R. Crosby and Mrs. Archie Blanchard. We looked in vain for Mrs. Edward W. Bigelow, chairman of the committee, and learned that she was confined at home owing to a severe cold. The play goes on now under the auspices of the Professional Players for four weeks, when Grace George will appear in "The First Mrs. Frazer."

THE MISSES TALBOT AND Fuller are having a dance given in their honor this evening at the Hotel Somerset by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Max Talbot and Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Fuller. Lady Astor Hostess

By T. C. WATSON

Universal Service Special Cable

London, Dec. 3—Two liveried footmen and the household butler were the only men present at the town residence of Lady Astor in St. James sq. last night, where all of Britain's most prominent women were entertained by the American-born first woman member of Parliament.

It was a strictly feminine party, not only at dinner but also later in the magnificent Adams ballroom, where the unaccompanied women celebrities received others of their sex, wide-eyed, admiring and alone. Like delegates to a convention all the guests wore tags bearing their names in large letters. Conversation was not of the sewing-circle vintage, but rather touched on every subject from safety pins to politics.

The 36 women guests present at the dinner included Amy Johnson, heroine of a recent lone flight to Australia, Miss Marjorie Foster, who defeated all men competitors in the shoot for the King's cup; Dame Laura Knight, celebrated artist, Prof. Winifred Cullis, brilliant woman physiologist; Diana Fishwick, women's golf champion; Lady Rhondda, writer and publisher; Miss Megan Lloyd George, daughter of the Liberal leader.

Clubwomen Urged to Aid Kindergartens in State

By NANCY BREWSTER

An opportunity to enjoy the happy world of the kindergarten should be the birthright of every child, says Mrs. Frederick S. Fogg, chairman of education in the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Fogg continues:

"The old theory that children were all alike has been exploded, for we know now that they have natures and aptitudes as varied as those of adults. How best to develop the mental, physical and social life of our children engages the attention of leading [illegible].

"We are told that the early years are formative ones, for character and personality are established then, and that if wrong habits are formed at this time they may cause mental and nervous disorders in mature life. Therefore, it is of paramount importance that children be guided early into good habits of mind and body.

"The kindergarten requires the child to take care of himself and his materials; it trains him in habits of health, obedience, punctuality, courtesy and co-operation; it gives him three hours daily of joyous activity and stimulating companionship, and it puts an expert in child training at the disposal of all mothers who wish help through the friendly visits that the teachers make to the pupils' homes."

BEFORE YOUR CHRISTMAS SHOPPING

The first step towards successful Christmas shopping is a pair of Arch Preserver Shoes.

They will give you the abundant energy to go from store to store; the comfort that makes showing the children around a delight.

The rigid, steel arch-bridge gives support at the three natural support points. There is no sagging. There is no straining of muscles.

Even the system of fitting in my two stores is unique. By the "heel-to-ball" system of measurement, every part of the shoe fits every part of the foot.

Cultivation of Corn

The origin of the growing of corn is attributed to Ceres, who, having taught the art to the Egyptians, was deified by them 2400 B. C. Corn was a common article of food from the earliest ages of the known world.

You Are Too Young to 'Take' Either Boy

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

BEATRICE FAIRFAX will gladly answer questions regarding heart and home problems. Address her in care of the Boston American. Write on one side of the paper only. If you wish a personal answer enclose self-addressed, stamped envelope. Otherwise, questions of interest will be answered through her daily columns.

Miss Fairfax broadcasts over Station WLEX every evening except Saturday and Sunday at 6.35 p. m.

Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX,

I am going on fourteen years old and I think I am in love with two boys. The first one, is not the type for kissing. The second one is very mushy but is very good to me and says he loves me. They are both nice to me and good natured. My people like the first and know his mother as they live upstairs in the same apartment. Please advise me which one to take.

ISABELLE

Dear Isabelle: You are much too young to "take" either of these boys for a steady sweetheart. Can't you be friends with them for a few years? You know it is impossible for you to marry for a long while, so just make up your mind to treat them both nicely. In five years you may find that neither of them interests you, and some one else will come along.

Will Keep Children

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I want to thank you for the advice you sent me. Sorry I cannot drop in and see you as I expect my baby any day now. I don't think I could give my children up as I love every one dearly, my friend does not give me support for the children. But he has been very good to me, also he has provided a doctor for the new baby, his only excuse is he could not support us the way he likes if he took us all. We are very poor, while he has been used to a good home.

ANXIOUS

Dear Anxious: I am glad you have decided to keep the children, and that you do love them all so dearly. I still think your friend is somewhat selfish and inconsiderate. After all, you are the one who is making all the sacrifices for the sake of his pleasures. When he says he could not support you in the way he would like, he really means that by marrying you he would sacrifice some of the pleasant surroundings he has always been used to, because he would have to share his income with others. It would be useless to try to force him, because he might make things very miserable for you, but I do wish he cared enough to try and make your burden of poverty and worry a little lighter.

Play Her Game

Dear Miss Fairfax

I am a girl of 17. I am keeping company with a man of 20. I like him very much and I think that he likes me, although I am quite undecided when a certain other girl is around. He takes me to many places and gives me a good time. But I think he has a little liking for her. For instance, we came home the other night in a friend's car. I, the fellow and the other girl rode in the rumble seat. I got out at my door and he went to get out with me, but she asked him not to leave her in the rumble seat alone as she would be cold. He asked me if I minded if he stayed in with her. I said no. Although I did care very much. What would you advise me to do in this case and about the girl? ANXIOUS

Dear Anxious: When in competition with an unscrupulous girl, play her game. Make a few demands on your boy friend, and don't let her get away with it all. It's wasted politeness in this case, and next time when he asks your permission to desert you just put your foot down, nicely of course, and say you'd like to have him stay with you. If you don't he may get the impression you don't care whether he stays or not, and will rush to warmer arms.

"DISAPPOINTED WIFE": I cannot print answers alone without printing part of the letter. If you wish a personal reply, please send full name and address.

Sunlight Prevents Rickets

Disease Rare in Outdoor Children

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.

ON A recent tour I inspected some public beaches. It was with great joy that I watched the youngsters romping on the beach. Their little bodies were scantily covered by clothing. Almost every part was exposed to the rays of the sun.

Dr. Copeland

How different the picture was years ago. Children were advised not to play in the sun for fear of becoming "overheated." As for the attire, the mothers of that day would have been shocked by such scanty clothing as is now in vogue.

When you and I were children, we were subjected to that terrible ordeal, taking the annual "Spring tonic." Usually this consisted of some form of cod liver oil. It has long been known that cod liver oil given to children would stimulate growth. Just why, we don't know.

Rickets is a disease of modern life. It was unknown to our ancestors, and is not prevalent today among people who enjoy sunshine and outdoor living. It is usually spoken of as a disease of faulty diet.

A diet lacking Vitamin D will produce rickets. Yet a deficiency of Vitamin D, if there is an abundance of sunlight, will not produce the disease. It is apparent that both these factors are important in the prevention of rickets.

As a result of our modern ways of living, rickets may easily be acquired. Its prevalence in children is common, and only within recent years has it been on the decline.

It is an ailment most common in children under two years of age. It may occur in older children as well as in adults. It is ten times more prevalent in artificially fed infants, although it occasionally occurs in breast-fed infants.

Children living in dark homes, with no sunlight, as in the city tenement houses, are more prone to develop rickets.

Babies that sleep poorly and are restless, should be suspected of rickets. A more definite sign is the tossing and moving of the head upon the pillow, a habit which soon rubs off the hair from the back of the head.

Children with rickets learn to walk at a late stage. Their muscles and bones are extremely weak and cannot support the body. They do not play well with other children and are backward in their general development.

Bowed legs or knock knees soon develop because of the muscular and bony weakness. The muscles of the abdomen are likely to relax, giving the child the so-called "pot-belly." These children, in addition to growth retardation, are anemic and extremely nervous.

Where rickets exists or there is a tendency toward it, cod liver oil should be given. As a preventive, rather than as a curative measure, exposure to the direct rays of the sun should be encouraged. Infants should not be shaded from the sun, but should be reasonably exposed to the sun. All children should be encouraged to play as much as possible in the sunlight.

Answers to Health Queries

A. D. R. Q.—What can be done for head noises? I have been treated without results.

A.—This disturbance may come from several different things. A catarrhal condition, high blood pressure or nervousness may be at the source. If there is any tendency to catarrh it should be cleared up first of all.

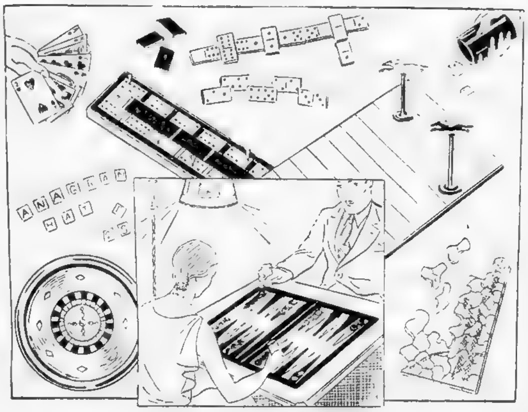
What's in Fashion?

Games for Adults

Directed by AMOS PARRISH



NEW YORK, Dec. 3—Folks are playing games again. Playing hard and furiously. Every night sees thousands of heads bent over boards or mechanisms or other things that promise a few hours' fun.

And that often promise hard work as well. So of course grown-up games are something to think about for Christmas.

Old-fashioned games are in fashion again—along with lots of new ones. And that's one reason why so many older people have started playing. Because so many of today's fashionable games are the ones they used to play a long time ago.

Take that old-fashioned game of backgammon that's caused such a furor this season. They've tried to change the pronunciation some calling it "bag-gammon" . . . and made some new rules about doubling and redoubling. But there are plenty of folks playing it the old fashioned way. And it's a good game any way you play it . . . on an elaborate pearl inlaid board or on a bridge table cover marked like a board.

Chess and Checkers

Maybe Grandpa would like a chess set for Christmas. But if he gets it, likely enough the younger fry will be playing it with him. Because young and old are at it.

Checkers, too. And — believe it or not — dominoes. While cribbage is having a revival as one of the finest two-handed games ever invented.

Remember the jig-saw puzzle? It's in fashion again, and a fine gift for anybody who anticipates long, lonely evenings this Winter. And anagrams make a good game for the whole family together — especially if one of them is weak on spelling.

Games for Everybody

Games make fine Christmas gifts for almost anybody, because there are so many different kind of games for adults that everybody's taste can be satisfied.

Anybody who mildly has the gambler's spirit will get a heap of fun out of the game of horse races. It's the same game they play on shipboard—horses moved by throws of the dice, and money—or chips—put on the winner by the pari-mutuel system.

Lots of folks are buying roulette wheels for their own and their friends' amusement if not profit. And it's hardly necessary to mention contract, auction, poker, Russian bank, fan-tan or any of the other card games that nightly lure the folks with the gambler's instinct . . . and that can be played with regulation card decks.

For the Athlete

Incidentally . . . you never in your life saw such grand looking cards and bridge sets as there are this Christmas. Modernistic designs, old-fashioned scenes, flower prints, dots, plaids, checks galore. Some of them come with heavy pasteboard coasters to match the cards—and save the bridge table from wet glass marks.

If you have athletic friends, try them with a ping pong set, one of the miniature golf courses designed for home use, quoits or darts. Shuffleboard—that ocean liner game—has been reduced to table size and deck tennis can now played in the cellar that's been made over into a game room.

And the friend who's not athletic but is intrigued by games of skill, will be glad to know that the old-fashioned game of jackstraws is being played again . . . if we can believe what we see in the movies!

BROKEN RAINBOWS ❖ ❖ By May Christy

She had thought to "put him off" the other girl . . . to disgust him with her.

She'd half a mind to follow them into the garden, break up their tete-a-tete, openly kidnap Logan.

Compared to Wilda, who was looking so rakishly droll, tonight she—Myrtle Gleeson—was a kind of queen she told herself.

But men were kittle cattle, and if she were too bold she might retard her own course instead of advancing it.

* * *

She Was Reckless

Logan Presumptuous

"What do you want to say?" Out of the shadow of the trees, Wilda, removed her arm from Logan's touch and stood still and looked up at him.

"Can't you guess why I asked you to come here?" There was unconscious rebuke in his voice.

"Not I. I'm no guesser. Out with it."

She felt resentful, too. That he should sit out here with Myrtle ever so long, and then march in and command her to follow him!

That was too much.

She had been cut to the soul over his neglect, and so—after Coral's ministrations to her looks . . . (She knew quite well that Coral had overdone the good effect, but what mattered it?) . . . she had gone to the punch-bowl and deliberately quaffed three glasses of the heady concoction.

That had altered her outlook. Given her such a feeling of freedom from responsibility, a sense of gay recklessness and a certain unaccustomed self-confidence.

And now he had dragged her away just when she had begun to show them all she had a fascination . .

"I hate to see you drinking that vile stuff. Darn it all, somehow I thought you were quite different, Wilda!"

"I? Different? What d'you mean?" In the fitful moonlight of the garden one couldn't see the make-up on her face . . . It looked small, and puzzled, and at the same time tantalizingly provocative . . .

But he hardened his heart against her. Then as she made a move as though to go . . .

"I don't want you to go back in there. Not now. Not until the fresh air has pulled you together."

She gave a queer little laugh. It sounded bitter. "Well, I like that! Just because I was low in spirits—and took a glass or two of Coral's punch—and began to feel jolly."

"You like? What have you to do with me? Why this sudden attack of flattering interest?"

"Oh, did you?"

"You know I did. I counted on it, Wilda. Here, come and sit down where we can talk this out." And he caught her arm again and made as though to take her over to the swinging couch under the magnolia.

Where he had sat with Myrtle . . . She wouldn't sit there, never! a little perversed demon urged her.

"Thanks for the kind interest, but the next dance has started, and as I'm booked for it please let go of my arm."

"Indeed I won't."

With a swift movement she had learned in the gymnasium she broke away from him.

Sunday morning in the Gardner home in Flatbush.

Her daughter must have everything she'd missed, to date. Good clothes . . . freedom to see the world and to observe . . . a chance to get out into the whirl of life in the best circumstance and mingle with the right people!

But today, looking back down the humdrum vista of her own married life, "the years that the locust had eaten," weighed heavily upon her.

This young girl—with the new opportunities that had fallen from the sky into their mutual laps—would have a very different future.

Wilda had sentimental notions. The child had been curiously contented in what she often laughingly referred to as the "bunny-hutch."

Well, they were through with that. Two female Columbuses, setting out on new worlds to conquer!

Bit Too Plump

Grace Looks in Mirror

The features of her face were regular . . . although time had thickened them a little.

And her neck—that used to be so long and graceful, like Bonnie Annie Laurie in the song—seemed now too short and thick-set . . .

Once they were away from here . . . (the bright sunlight showed the gray streaks in her hair . . . she must have her hair hennaed).

Just think of Fanny Ward. Think what a pioneer she was, in middle-aged rejuvenation.

And why shouldn't she herself, who had been repressed these many years—step out now with the best of them?

Why should Wilda — much as she loved the girl—get all the plums from the tree of life, merely because she was in the early twenties?

Didn't they say that over in Europe there was a great charm about maturity . . . ?

The Beauty Box ❖ By HELEN FOLLETT

WHEN THE mouth is pretty it may be accentuated with a suggestion of coloring, a faint tinting with lipstick of natural tone. When the mouth is not well outlined or attractive, it is best undecorated. Rouge calls attention to defects, thickness of the lips, or a discontented expression. A rouged mouth with lips drawn down is a beauty contradiction: the color bespeaks youth and vitality, the expression is that of old age and lost illusions.

Katisha boasted and bragged about her pretty elbows. If she had pretty elbows she was entitled to yodel. Few women have them. Few women do anything to make their elbows presentable. Rough skin usually covers the hinge joint of the arms, and it needs frequent anointing with a heavy massage cream. If bones show up sharp points, massage is especially needful. Dimpled elbows are among the rarest of beauty blessings.

Advice for 'Co-Ed' on Etiquette

By MRS. BEECKMAN.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

1. Is it proper for a girl to accept any fall rushing dates if she is not planning to enter the university until spring?

2. Who is a gentleman in a party of four supposed to call for first?

3. Should a lady always make the first gesture of writing to a gentleman?

4. Would it be correct in the case of a lady congratulating a young man who has just made a great step towards success?

READER

1. Yes, if she wishes to or [illegible] that the [illegible] of the university does not [illegible] that she refuse these dates.

2. There wouldn't be any rule about this, except the suggestion of convenience or very decided inclination. If he is engaged to one of the girls, for instance, naturally he would wish to call for her first.

3. No, quite the reverse. The gentleman asks the lady for the privilege of writing to her, and naturally he exercises this privilege first, by writing to her first, to show that he is grateful to her for her permission.

4. Yes, such an occasion would call for the giving over of precendence of writing the first letter, for the girl would naturally wish to get her letter at once to the fortunate friend.

Accepting a Fraternity Pin

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

Does it really mean anything serious when a young man wants a young lady to wear his fraternity pin? This young man belongs to a fraternity that gives two pins exactly alike. When he wishes a girl to wear one, it means that she is engaged to him [illegible] in a serious manner?

WONDERING

The giving of a fraternity pin does not mean anything special unless when the pin is given the man and girl decide together that it does have a "special meaning." Fraternity pins are given rather indiscriminately nowadays—perhaps this is indicated by the fact that the fraternity gives two pins to its members—and a girl should not attach any special sentimental significance to it unless that significance is really made clear. A diamond ring isn't always an engagement ring, you know!

The Fiancee's Gift

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

Would it be proper for me, an engaged girl, to buy my fiance a wrist watch as a Christmas gift?

CONSTANT READER

Yes. The fact that you are engaged gives you the right to give your fiance this kind of gift for Christmas.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

Desserts Children May Eat With Safety

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WLEX

ALL TOO often Johnny or Mary are told to eat all their spinach and baked potato because the dessert is too heavy for them and they mustn't have any tonight.

Martha Lee

Of course it is sometimes necessary for grown-ups to have [illegible] and other [illegible] which the children cannot eat, but it would be very nice and it is also very possible to let the children eat the same things as mother and dad" which of course gives them quite a thrill.

Part of the time the dessert problem may be solved by the use of gelatin [illegible] since they are light and the children may be allowed to eat them without fear of "tummy" ache. And let me whisper it [illegible] for mother and [illegible] if they [illegible] the sweet tooth with [illegible] desserts more often than they do. A light dessert may make all the difference in the world in that after dinner distressed feeling with symptoms of indigestion.

Raspberry Rice Bavarian makes a particularly nice party dish. Dissolve one package of raspberry gelatin in one cup of boiling water. Add two tbsp. of sugar and the syrup drained from a medium sized can of raspberries and cool. When quite thick fold in one-half cup beaten cream, one cup cold boiled rice and the raspberries. Pour into a fancy mold, preferably star shaped with a hollow center. Chill. Turn out and fill center and between rays of the star with whipped cream. Serves eight.

Coffee Pinapple Spanish Cream is also an interesting variation of the coffee gelatin. Scald two cups of milk with two tbsp. of ground coffee, strain through a double cheese cloth. Beat two egg yolks slightly, add one-fourth cup of sugar and scalded milk and return to double boiler and cook till it coats the spoon, stirring all the time. Meanwhile, soften one tbsp. of gelatin in two tbsp. of cold water, then dissolve in the hot coffee mixture.

Cool, and when about ready to set, fold in two beaten egg whites. Pour into a fancy mold and set in ice box until cold and stiff. Turn out on platter. Cut sliced pineapple wheels in halves and make a border of them around the base of the mold cut sides down. In the holes in the pineapple place [illegible] and cherries. [illegible] cream on top. Serves six.

[illegible] be a bad idea [illegible] can be made from [illegible] fruits and vegetables by the proper use of a gelatin base. The mayonnaise [illegible] can be used for fish or meat salad.

MAYONNAISE SALAD BASE

1 level tbsp. plain gelatin
¼ cup cold water
1 cup cooked salad dressing
2 tsp. vinegar
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. paprika
Tabasco sauce or
Other seasonings in very small amounts

Soak gelatin in cold water about five minutes. Heat cooked salad dressing or mayonnaise and add soaked gelatin. Stir mixture thoroughly [illegible] is dissolved. Add vinegar [illegible] seasonings and [illegible] for a fish or meat salad [illegible] to above mixture the following:

1 cup fish or cooked meat (tuna, salmon, crab, chicken or veal)
½ cup cut celery
¼ green pepper, cut small
2 tbsp. cut stuffed green olives

Martha Lee

Women's Exchange

I have just [illegible] a new way when [illegible] ice cubes from [illegible] refrigerator [illegible] dish [illegible] like [illegible] fish [illegible] all over the kitchen but I [illegible] them today.

Forbes States Hoover Wants Rail Mergers

Urges Eastern Nabobs to Stop Bickering and Submit Plans

By B. C. FORBES

New York, Dec 3—I am addressing the following open letter to the gentlemen named

W. W. Atterbury, president, Pennsylvania Railroad; Patrick E Crowley, president, New York Central Railroad; Daniel Willard, president, Baltimore & Ohio Railroad; O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen, [illegible] Chesapeake & Ohio, Nickel Plate, [illegible]

B. C. Forbes

Th[illegible] come [illegible] drop a[illegible] structions [illegible] ties and [illegible] agree upon definite plan for creation of trunk line systems, in accordance with the spirit of the Transportation Act of 1920

You have been bickering and quarreling long enough.

The public are reaching the conclusion that personal ambition, personal pride, personal vanity must be in some measure responsible for the unconscionable delay in agreeing to the allocation of properties.

Today there is dire need for every citizen doing everything within his power to combat depression and unemployment

You can do more than perhaps any other five business men in America, first, to bring about a transformation in sentiment, and, second, to set in motion very substantial expenditures—for electrification, for terminals, for equipment, etc

You presumably will have to reach a conclusion sooner or later—or have an agreement fastened upon you by the authorities at Washington.

Why dilly-dally, why work at cross-purposes, for a further indefinite period?

Why not picture the existing situation in this country as an emergency, an emergency demanding the waging of warfare against the continuation of widespread unemployment, industrial activity, pessimistic sentiment?

Will you not, therefore, get together in this spirit, adopt a policy of give-and-take, determined to end the deadlock which has too long existed?

I understand that President Hoover is extremely anxious that you follow this course.

I understand, moreover, that if you gentlemen will compose your differences and present agreed-upon plans to the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Chief Executive will enthusiastically use his influence to expedite official approval.

Members of the Interstate Commission cannot but be imbued with a keen sense of the emergency conditions now confronting the nation. That they would not be eager to co-operate to the limit in hastening the return of confidence and business activity and fuller employment is unthinkable.

* * *

Whether the gentlemen to whom the foregoing is addressed will take constructive or obstructive action remains to be seen.

I am informed that President Hoover has undergone a mental transformation. Whereas heretofore he has refrained from asserting himself I am told he is now determined to force an aggressive policy. Criticism has finally stung him. He realizes that his record heretofore has not won his general popularity.

Instead of remaining in the background, his intimates now tell me he is determined to assert himself vigorously. In this matter of railway consolidations he is represented as having very emphatic views—he wants action, not further palaver.

According to my information, this attitude he has communicated without equivocation to those upon whom devolves the chief responsibility for action or inaction in Eastern railway consolidations.

Our so-called leaders, not only in the transportation world, but in other walks of life, have not raised themselves in public esteem during 1930, to say the least. It is high time they bestirred themselves to earn a different public estimate of themselves

Utah Copper Aids Curtailment Move

Salt Lake City, Dec. 3—D. D. Moffat, vice-president and general manager of Utah Copper, announces that the company will further curtail it's output of copper by 8 per cent. In recent months Utah Copper has been operating at less than half its capacity and at a rate of around two-thirds of its normal production, or an average of 27,000 tons per day.

HIGHER LIVING STANDARD IS FAVORED

By FRANK H. MELOON

American standard of living has been rising steadily ever since the Pilgrim Fathers landed on or near Plymouth Rock. Paul Mazur, addressing the National Asn. of Ad vertisers, comes out in favor of a still higher standard of living in the United States. Of course our living standards will continue to rise, even though the average American home is better equipped for comfort today than the palaces of royalty a century or less ago.

Lord Inchcape, prominent British ship owner, is quoted as saying he foresees the day when ships will be driven [illegible] n Gloucester Bay. The successful experiment [illegible] line were conducted several months ago by John Hays Hammond, Jr., who spends his time in his Gloucester "castle" making inventions. Mr. Hammond's inventions are already numerous, many of them in general commercial use

Journal of Commerce hears that control of International Nickel has passed to United States interests. Several months ago there was considerable excitement caused north of the frontier by reports that control was passing from Canadian hands. Some British companies are so constructed that home rule is always assured

If "cleanliness is next to godliness," the American people appear to be happily situated. Soap manufacturers in the United States last year produced more than 25 pounds of soap products for every person in the country. There were 274 establishments which in 1929 produced 2,188,613,984 pounds of hard soaps, 288,409,786 pounds of granulated and powdered soap, 452,723,389 pounds of soap powders, 20,851,475 pounds of liquid soap, 63,741,783 pounds of soft soap, and 41,170,425 pounds of paste soap, or a total of 3,055,510,842 pounds, with a total value of $303,377,358. For our population of 120,000,000 persons this would provide one-half pound of soap per person per week.

Director Hugh Butler of the Boston division of the U. S. Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce has the following letter, relating to his address in a nearby city, as reported in this column

"The next day after getting your letter—the one giving that ghastly figure of $1,000,000,000 waste in distribution in New England—I called on a good customer. After several hours of fierce argument about prices, I turned on them with this remark. 'Why all this tearing at prices? Our trouble today is in this terrible waste in distribution; why, it amounts to as much as $1,000,000,000 right here in New England.' My customer fairly bristled at this suggestion, and came back at me with: 'I'll bet you can't point out one single feature in our distribution system that is inefficient!'" This was all that I wanted in the way of an opening. I went right to it and the discussion from then on centered on the question of the hour, increased sales efficiency and cutting out trade wastes.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Potential significance of a firmer steel price policy which would [illegible] the entire [illegible] in the current [illegible] that the stock market may be drawing unduly cheerful interpretations of what is going on, however, may be granted. Steel common has furnished rather impressive leadership on the upside

The best-posted people in the steel industry emphasize that, before any price advances are to be expected, there must first be achieved stabilization at the "minimum quotations," shading of which has been the most disturbing feature of the industry's position. However, it is claimed by the steel leaders that there has been very marked betterment of late with respect to universal recognition of the minimum price base

Childs Does Well in Current Year

Childs has done well this far in [illegible] 000 and real estate holdings are carried on the books as approximately $24,000,000. The company operates about 110 [illegible] of which nearly [illegible] located in New York.

Lorillard Earnings Show Increase

Predictions in Wall Street are that Lorillard will show earnings this year of between $1 and $1.50 a share. This would compare with 20 cents a share in 1929 and 75 cents a share in 1928. There has been a moderate amount of accumulation of the stock on a scale during all recent reactions by interests who contend that the shares are entitled to sell at a higher price on book value.

Continental Can in Strong Position

Continental Can is in a strong position in its industry. Business of the company this year, despite the falling off in general industrial activity, has been decidedly satisfactory and was well maintained throughout the period. Favorable weather up to a week or so ago prolonged the canning season, so that there was a good steady demand for the company's product. The outlook for next year is considered bright by interests close to the management.

They base their belief on the fact that the packers' carry-over this year will not be more than normal any improvement in general business should result in further gains in Continental's activities.

General Motors Is a Favorite

Houses with Detroit connections and affiliations report that General Motors is one of the favorites in that territory. Considerable favorable comment has been made there regarding the ability of the company to maintain its regular dividend in the current year, which was a period of poor business in the automobile industry generally.

In Detroit it is the confident belief that General Motors will pay extras from time to time when motor trade conditions are again favorable. Most of the buying from this city is said to have been of the long pull variety with the stock being paid for and taken out of the market.

Remington Rand's Expenses Lower

Remington Rand is operating at 78 per cent of the 1929 rate during the fourth quarter of the calendar year. Operations also were at that rate in the preceding quarter and it is believed by those in close touch with the company's affairs that it will operate at at least 78 per cent of the 1929 rate in first quarter of 1931

The company seems practically certain to show its $1.60 annual common dividend earned in the 12 months ended December 31. In fact, as the three months ended December 31 are normally the best period of the year for office-equipment companies the dividend should be earned by a good margin

Holiday Lowers Electric Figures

National Electric Light Association reports today that production [illegible] by [illegible] light and power industry of the country was 1,680,413,000 kilowatt-hours for the week ended Nov. 29, a decrease of 41,943,000 from the previous week because of the Thanksgiving holiday. Output was 3.8 per cent below the figure for the corresponding week of 1929 and 17 per cent above 1928.

Plymouth Cordage's Profit Is $287,508

For year ended Sept 30, the century-old Cordage Co. reports a profit after depreciation and tax reserve of $287,508, equal to 3.55 per cent on combined $8,000,000 capital stock of $100 par value and $108,280 employes' special stock of $10 par. This is after an inventory shrinkage of $2,131,617 partly met by use of an inventory reserve of $949,161, established in the 1929 fiscal year

"Long Pull" Buying in Republic Steel

Although operations of Republic Steel during the current quarter are disappointing, it is evident that quiet "long pull" accumulation is taking place in the stock. This is partly based on the prospects for a betterment in the steel industry early next year as well as on the belief that present levels for Republic largely discount the unfavorable trade situation. The current accumulation, however, is being [illegible] in [illegible] the fact that those actively associated with the company have not as yet completed their accumulation year, when huge amounts of the stock were bought by Canadian and English investors and speculators. Most of this stock, however, returned to the United States during the panic. According to well-informed interests, control of Nickel probably rests with no single group, although sufficient stock is in Wall Street hands to assure American domination.

Active Sponsorship for Gold Dust

Further Advance in Copper Expected

Accumulation in copper stocks is based largely on prospects of a further advance in prices within the relatively near future. It is understood that fabricators and custom smelters have arrived at an agreement regarding the disposition of copper with the result that the fabricators have agreed to purchase the daily output of custom smelters. They would assure the latter of a steady demand for their output so that there would be no need for further price cutting. The success of such an agreement naturally would result in greater stability in copper prices.

Profit Taking in National Biscuit

Rapidity of the recovery in National Biscuit is attracting quiet profit taking from interests who bought the stock during the recent unsettlement. The selling, however was not particularly aggressive, but it was evident that the character of the buying had become more speculative. This is largely due to the fact that investors are disinclined to follow values too far at the present time. Incidentally the recent recovery has again carried "Biscuit" to a level where it is again selling at a rather high ratio to earning basis

25-Ct. Borg-Warner Payment Expected

Directors of Borg-Warner Corp. are scheduled to meet for dividend action December 5. Consensus at present favors the declaration of a 25-cent dividend on the common which would bring total payments for the year to $2.75 a share. Previous quarterly declaration was 75 cents.

New York Central to Order Rails

New York Central Railroad will be in the market in the next few days for a large amount of rails. While the exact amount has not been decided upon by officials of the road it is known the figure will be substantially more than 125,000 tons.

Stocks Selling at Low Prices

One trader estimates about every third stock on the list is selling below book value. Some are selling 25 per cent below, others 50 per cent or more. Last year nearly every stock on the list was selling above book value, and the public was clamoring for them. Now, people don't seem to want them, even with higher yields and, on basis of actual worth, selling for 50 to 75 cents on the dollar

Bethlehem Steel Rumors Scouted

No one placed much credence in rumors that Bethlehem was negotiating for control of several big independent steel companies, that it was seeking to make a steel company almost as large as U. S. Steel. Everyone konws Bethlehem will continue to grow and will absorb other companies from time to time, but the process will be slow. Its production 10 years from now will be far greater, but it will have to go some if it strives to become the greatest steel company in the world. U. S. Steel is spending annually close to $100,000,000 for construction, or more than the capitalization of some of existing large companies as valued now in the market.

U. S. Rubber in Demand

Firmness displayed by U S Rubber common recently is due almost entirely to steady absorption by interests closely associated with the management of the company. This buying it is understood represents long pull accumulation based on the belief that earnings of the company have turned the corner. Operations of the company during the third quarter will prove unsatisfactory but this may partly be attributed to the heavy write-offs which the company will make in that period. Consequently, any improvement in its business would be reflected in the earnings of the company more quickly. Incidentally, it is known that an investment trust is increasing its holdings both in Rubber common and preferred.

BORROWING BY STATES AND CITIES UP

State and municipal bond flotations in 1930 will aggregate close to $1,500,000,000 according to an estimate made by The Daily Bond Buyer of New York, whose survey shows that the issues marketed during the 11 months of the current year amount to $1,286,219,500. For the corresponding period of last year, the total was $1,155,864,382.

During the final months of the year the following large issues are scheduled for sale: Missouri, $5,000,000, South Carolina, $10,000,000, Baltimore, Md, $1,134,000, Houston, Tex, $3,730,000, Philadelphia, Pa., $15,000,000; Salt Lake City, Utah, $2,000,000, Providence, R. I., $3,000,000; New Orleans, La., $4,000,000, Louisiana, $15,000,000

CURB MARKET INTEREST LOW

New York, Dec. 3—Speculative interest was at a low ebb on the Curb today. Lack of buying inquiry sent prices shading lower. Although losses in only a few stocks were more than nominal the trend of the list was toward lower levels. Volume was again small.

Cities Service encountered considerable selling, especially in the earlier hours when it was pushed down about 2 points. Other active oils were mostly steady

Utilities eased in light turnovers. United Light "B," an inactive, broke 3 points and American Superpower preferred lost nearly 2, sagging below 90. Middle West Utilities, Associated Gas "A," United Light "A," Niagara Hudson and most of the other leaders were off moderately Largest losses were suffered by infrequently traded stocks, such as Elgin National Watch, which dropped more than 5.

Diamond Match new was well supported in expectation that the recapitalization plan would become effective, since the management's requirement that 97 per cent of the old stock be deposited has now been virtually fulfilled

Boerse Is Steady on Light Selling

Berlin, Dec. 3 (AP)—The boerse presented a distinctly steady appearance, with little selling today, in reaction to the reconvening of the Reichstag and imminent consideration of the government's financial measures. Closing was inactive, but the firm tendency was maintained.

Motor Industry Makes Ready for Big Demand

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

New York, Dec. 3—Americans have been riding down the highway of depression in high powered automobiles.

M. S. Rukeyser

In spite of the falling off in the sales of new cars, Americans have probably ridden more miles in motor cars this year than ever before. The gasoline consumption figures suggest this inference.

With consumers disobeying the so-called law of obsolescence and getting more use of their present cars instead of trading them in, there has accumulated a pent-up demand for new cars, which will become increasingly effective when potential buyers believe that a genuine turn for the better in the economic situation has come. Meantime, tires and other parts are being worn out to an extraordinary degree, and shortages are in the making

Out of the present depression, the industry is likely to make marked strides toward a solution of the used car problem. Presidents of some of the representative automobile companies have told me that their own used car situation is better than it has been in years. Furthermore, present consumer policies of using old cars will ease up the used car problem in future years, for, with the original owners getting more use out of their cars than ever before, there will be less unused mileage in the same cars for the second and third owners.

Since the middle of October, the improvement in the demand for new cars has been a little better than seasonal. Dealers' stocks of cars are reported to be moderate. General Motors executives take pride out of the fact that in recent months they have increased their ratio of sales to those of the industry as a whole. Meantime, the low priced trade is disturbed by rumors to the effect that Ford might produce 200,000 eights next year. If the report is baseless, the sage of Dearborn could contribute to stability by denying it.

General observers are watching the immediate trend with hawk-like eyes, because of the increasing feeling that the automobile and construction industries are the new balance wheels of American prosperity. The moderate turn about in residential construction is also a favorable straw in the winds, like the recovery in textiles which in 1921 led the way to general business recovery.

* * *

Lucius S. Storrs, able president of the United Railways & Electric Company of Baltimore, tells me that statistics of passenger traffic on urban transportation lines constitutes an excellent guide to the volume of industrial activity in a city. This is especially true in recent years, since the automobile has relieved the surface lines of much pleasure or non-business travel.

* * *

In explaining the ability of the Coca-Cola Company to boost its earnings for the first nine months Harold Hirsch, vice president, informed me

"We are glad to report an improvement in earnings that has held good for the nine months' period, and also that the increase in earnings is due primarily to the increase in volume of business; however, as a minor factor, there were certain operating economies. The earnings for the third quarter of 1930 were $4,899,091 and for 1929, $4,661,321."

Commenting on the oft-repeated assertion that retail prices have not yet fully reflected changes in primary markets, D. M. Nelson vice-president in charge of merchandising of Sears, Roebuck & Co., in a message to this column, points out.

"Retail prices have in the main fully reflected the decline in wholesale prices due to the keen fight for business at the present time. However, wholesale prices on most commodities are not in line with the drop in basic commodities. It is very questionable whether or not the readjustment would be hastened by having retail prices in line with commodity prices, which in the average are lower than at any time in the past 20 years."

Shawmut Gathering Walker Talks to

At the third in the National Shawmut Bank's series of lectures on banking sponsored by the Women's Advisory Committee of the bank held at the Arlington st. branch, Vice-President Joseph T. Walker, Jr., of the Shawmut Corporation, touched upon the development of the corporate form of organization and traced the growth of a typical corporation from the time of the granting of its charter. He illustrated the various forms of financing by which a corporation could obtain money.

STOCK MARKET LOWER AFTER NEW RALLY

New York, Dec. 3—The stock market showed persistent heaviness during the latter part of today's session, and the closing tone was weak.

Trading was more active, the turnover aggregating 2,500,000 shares.

Such shares as U. S. Steel, General Electric, North American, American Telephone, American Can, Allied Chemical, Du Pont and Missouri Pacific, lost about 2 to 3 points. Pere Marquette dropped 6.

The cautious advance of the past three days had been too unimpressive to attract much following. President Hoover's report that conditions did not warrant continuation of the 1 per cent income tax reduction was an adverse psychological factor, although Wall Street bankers have traditionally favored a conservative fiscal policy.

STEEL PRICES UP.

After a slight slump in the first hour, the list recovered until more extensive selling appeared in the early afternoon, causing fairly general declines of a point or two.

Announcement by Carnegie and Bethlehem Steels of a $1 a ton advance in quotations for plates, shapes and bars for the first quarter had been foreshadowed several weeks ago, when steel producers warned their customers that current quotations could not be guaranteed for the first quarter.

It had been previously discounted by the market and failed to have further influence. Iron Age reported that the seasonal decline in steel production had continued during the past week, reducing operations to 39 per cent of capacity, from 41 a week previously.

RESULTS AWAITED.

It was pointed out that the increase was presumably an effort to bring out latent business. Similar moves were made during the depression in 1927 and 1922. While Wall Street in the main viewed the move as constructive, it was inclined to await results before turning enthusiastically bullish.

The report of electric power production was the most favorable of the mid-week statistics. The week ended Nov. 29 showed a decline of only 3.8 per cent from the like week of last year, while the preceding week had shown a drop of 6.2 per cent.

The weekly freight car loadings figures, covering the period ended November 22, were again unfavorable, showing a drop of nearly 50,000 cars from the previous week, a reduction substantially larger than seasonally normal.

The weekly patroleum figures were about a stand-off. While crude output was further restricted, gasoline stocks on hand increased substantially, about cancelling the reduction of the previous week.

Credit conditions held steady, with call money still at 2 per cent. There was little demand, and offerings were light. There has been some relaxation of the money market since Monday, however, when loan calling was extensive.

SISTO & CO. IS TO RESUME

New York, Dec. 3—Judge Alfred C. Coxe of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York confirmed the plan of composition offered to creditors of J. A. Sisto & Co.

This plan calls for the payment of 50 per cent in cash and 50 per cent in notes of a company formed for the liquidation of certain assets, which, it is believed, according to a statement issued by the firm, will be sufficient to meet the balance due the general creditors.

The creditors' committee handling this settlement is composed of Charles A. Frueauff, chairman; Charles C. Nicholls, Jr., and Richard J. Fitzmaurice.

J. A. Sisto & Co., in a statement made public today, announced that additional capital has been secured and "the company is looking forward to a continuation of their regular business at their offices at 68 Wall st." The partners of the firm will remain the same. The statement says:

"The opportunity to resume business in so short a time was made possible principally by the confidence of the firm's customers and banking friends."

Grains Are Lower in Chicago Market

Chicago, Dec. 3—After ruling slightly firmer during the forenoon today, wheat prices sold off and closed ⅛ to ⅜c lower. Late weakness in the Winnipeg market figured in the reaction. Corn closed ⅝ to 1⅛c lower and oats ½ to ⅝c off. Rye was ⅜c down to ⅛c up.

Dominion Stores Pays

More Telephones in Use With Coast Leading Gains

San Francisco, Dec. 3—According to a report by H. D. Pillsbury, president of Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co., it is indicated that the company has been able to show a gain of approximately 2 per cent in installed telephones in the first three quarters of this year, as against an average gain for the American Telephone & Telegraph system of about sixtenths of 1 per cent.

ADVICE TO INVESTORS IS FREE

Before you buy or sell stocks or bonds, you ought to secure unbiased expert advice. Send your investment inquiries with stamp to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. All replies made by mail direct.

INCOME ASSURED

A. A., Brighton — Among stocks I own are twenty-two shares United States Steel at higher levels. How do earnings compare with dividends? Do you think any extras will be paid this year?

Ans.—Only the regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 a share will be paid December 30 on United States Steel common. A year ago an extra of $1 was distributed. Earnings for nine months ended September 30 equaled $8.44 a share, or more than dividends for the entire year. In the first nine months of 1929 net income was equivalent to $15.94 a share. In the full year 1929 net amounted to $21.19 a share, compared with $12.50 in 1928 on a smaller capitalization. Regular dividends have been paid from 1916; current $7 rate from second quarter of 1926. If you bought for income you can afford to retain the stock, irrespective of fluctuations.

CANNOT GUESS

B. E., Lynn—What do you think of the outlook for Simmons? I shall appreciate a little information.

Ans.—If you want a forecast on future prices, you have come to the wrong source. You know as much about fluctuations as anyone. Simmons Company is a large manufacturer of mattresses, beds and various types of furniture, but earnings so far this year have been unsatisfactory. Net for six months ended June 30 was only 15 cents a share. For the full year ended December 31, 1929, net income was equivalent to $4.15 a share, contrasted with $3.89 for 1928. Sales for nine months ended September 30 totaled $25,611,036, compared with $31,158,266 for corresponding period in 1929, a decrease of 17.8 per cent. Dividends of $3 a share annually had been distributed from third quarter of 1928; quarterly payment due August 1, 1930, was omitted. The stock is a speculation.

SPECULATIVE STOCK

A. R., Salem—I own $2,000 S. W. Straus first mortgage 6s and want to buy stock. What would you say to a purchase of Granby Consolidated?

Ans.—Under present conditions in the copper industry, all copper stocks must be considered speculations. Recently directors of Granby Consolidated Mining put the stock on an annual basis of $2 a share, contrasted with the $3 rate inaugurated August 1, 1930, which followed a reduction from the $8 rate maintained from November 1, 1929. For nine months ended September 30, net income before depreciation, depletion and taxes, etc., was $1,278,500, compared with $3,176,980 for similar period last year. Net income in 1929 amounted to $6.24 a share, compared with $3.45 in 1928 and 22 cents in 1927. The bonds you have are sound. You should continue along conservative lines.

CANNOT GUESS

E. E., Boston—I own some Consolidated Gas and United Corporation on which I have a paper loss. Do you think these stocks will sell higher or lower?

Guessing future prices for securities is distinctly outside our line. Your surmise in that direction would be as good as anyone's. All we can say is that you can rely on an income from Consolidated Gas. The company is the largest operating gas and electric light enterprise in the country. Dividends have been maintained on the common stock for more than forty years. In November, 1929, the annual rate was increased to $4, compared with $3 paid from 1928. Though regular dividends are paid on United Corporation preferred, viz., 50 cents a share October 1; no further announcement. That stock is a speculation.

STOCKS AND BONDS

G. L., Brookline—I am a business man and have saved $10,000 over a period of many years. This is hard-earned money. I want to invest $8000 and shall depend solely on your suggestions.

Ans.—Buy $2000 each Steneck Trust 5½s and Prudence Company 5½s; ten shares each Bangor & Aroostook preferred, Devoe & Reynolds first preferred, West Penn Electric 6 per cent preferred and twenty-five Hackensack Water preferred. Here you have a total cost of approximately $7900 and a combined annual income of $457.

SAVES $5,000

J. W., Boston—I am a wage earner, with dependants, and want to invest $5,000. What do you suggest?

Ans.—If $5,000 is all you have, keep $1,000 cash in the savings bank. You may need it. Then, buy $2,000 S. W. Straus first mortgage 6s, ten shares each American Water Works & Electric first preferred, and fifteen Kansas City Southern preferred. The total cost is $4,000 and the combined annual income $240.

STEEL PRICES ADVANCED

New York, Dec. 3 (AP)—The Carnegie Steel Co. today announced an increase of $1 a ton in prices on bars, shapes and plates, bringing the minimum quotation for first quarter delivery to $1.65 a hundred pounds.

Bethlehem Steel Corp. also advanced prices $1 a ton on bars, shapes and plates for first quarter delivery.

Reports that important interests in the steel industry were planning an increase in prices had been current for some time, especially since a minimum schedule was established not long ago.

Carnegie Steel, a U. S. Steel subsidiary, was the leader in this movement to stabilize prices, and becomes the first large company to make an increase.

Increasing costs, decreasing earnings and a belief that a stand on prices would stimulate demand were said in trade circles to have prompted the action, which is expected to be followed by other influential producers.

Atlantic National Dividend Ordered

Atlantic National Bank declared regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents a share, payable Jan. 2 to stock of record Dec. 3.

PORT OF BOSTON

A falling off in vessels arriving and passengers landing from foreign countries at the Port of Boston was indicated by comparative statistics available at the Custom House for the commerce and passenger business of the port.

During November, 101 steamers and 7 schooners arrived as compared with 124 steamers and 11 schooners, last year. During the 11 months, this year, 1330 steamers, 216 schooners and eight airplanes arrived, a total of 1554 arrivals, contrasted with 1432 steamers, 177 schooners and 11 airplanes, a total of 1620 arrivals for the same period last year.

Passenger business has decreased by 1000 persons, figures show.

XMAS IN ERIN

Excursionists bound for Ireland for the Christmas season, as well as individuals, insure a large booking when the Samaria, Cunard liner, expected to arrive in Boston, Sunday, from Liverpool and Queenstown, sails from Boston Dec. 13.

John Lynch, of the Cunard Line office in Boston, will head an excursion party of New Englanders going to Ireland for Christmas.

The Samaria will sail a day ahead of schedule and will arrive in Queenstown, Dec. 20. She will bring 91 passengers here Sunday.

SHORE LEAVE

Warrant officers from the various United States Coast Guard bases in the Boston district will attend the "shore leave social," at the Bradford Hotel, tonight, under the auspices of the U. S. Coast Guard Warrant Officers' Association of the Boston District. The committee in charge is headed by the officers of the organization, Boatswains Michael J. Bruce, president; R. F. Sullivan, vice-president and Phillip Shannon, treasurer.

SAFE AND SOUND

Reports that the schooner Georgette, from Georgetown, S. C., by way of Norfolk and Boston, lumber laden, was crippled with a broken spar were exaggerated. The ship had only torn a sail. She was bringing 750,000 feet of lumber here.

SMALL STEAMER

One of the smallest steamers to arrive in Boston in recent years, the Siak, Norwegian freighter, made her first visit here. She unloaded 1,500 tons of salt at pier 45 Mystic Wharves.

RADIO Personalities

After dial-fiddling for a while the other night we chanced on WMCA, N. Y. and heard ERNIE GOLDEN, the orchestra leader, announce that he would play a new number called "Night and Day" which he had just composed with R. VALLEE. With malice toward none we surmised that neither Ernie or Rudy composed the piece but the piccolo, piano or some player in Ernie's group. Said composer figured that with Ernie's name on the score the piece would sell more copies. And Ernie figured the same way with Rudy. Hence a three way split . . . ROSA PONSELLE who sings on the A-K program Sunday, rose from a "Nickelodeon" entertainer to "Met" opera prima donna . . . BILLY JONES and ERNIE HARE are the same weight, height, wear the same size clothes, hats, shoes and have the same likes and dislikes . . . The first audition for nineteen-year-old AUDREY MARSH resulted in a long term contract . . . MRS. "AMOS" and MRS. "ANDY" live on the same floor in adjoining apartments in Chicago, and the two wives are constant companions.

Presentation to Sir Thomas Lipton Heard on WNAC and WBZA Tomorrow Noon

For being "the world's best loser," Sir Thomas Lipton, British sportsman who has many times raced an American contender for the America's cup, but has never won, will receive a consolation prize presented by Mayor Walker at the New York City Hall tomorrow, and the ceremonies will be broadcast. Both the Columbia and National hookups, including WNAC and WBZA will carry the program heard from 12 noon to 12:30 p. m.

Over the Columbia chain, locally heard on WNAC, Ted Husing, who broadcast the races between Sir Thomas' Shamrock V and the New York Yacht Club's defender Enterprise off Newport last summer, will describe the ceremonies and bring the mayor and Sir Thomas to the microphone for speeches of presentation and acceptance.

Similarly, the NBC chain with WBZA carrying the program in the local area, will offer the radio audience the presentation speech and Sir Thomas' response. One of NBC's star announcers, as yet undecided on will be in charge at the microphone.

The popular Great Britain sportsman is to be presented a gold loving cup instead of a silver loving cup, as was originally planned. The proceeds for the cup were given by residents of the states at large, the silver base being contributed by residents of Utah.

Musical Cut-Up

Concerning Radio

Edited by BILL WHIPPLE

No one can gainsay that radio is having a powerful influence on our national life; probably to a greater extent than the average person realizes. In a manner it is not only affecting our home life but it also is influencing our very thoughts. Nothing since the art of making type letters first came into existence can compare with radio in its relation to human progress.

We Americans are rather proud of the tremendous growth our country has shown in the past hundred years; its high development and the superior living conditions which we enjoy over those of most other countries. Many things have been responsible for our expansion and growth, and of not the least important among them has been the wheel; be it push-cart, wagon, engine or automobile wheel.

But far surpassing everything else in shaping our destiny, in our humble opinion, has been the printed word. True indeed is that old adage, "The pen is mightier than the sword." The newspapers, and in later years other kinds of periodicals also, have been the mighty factors which drove us to greater deeds and higher ideals; which welded at least the thoughts and hearts of our citizenry into a great powerful unit.

One fact, too, is outstanding, as related to our newspapers, as a whole they are clean. Sordid things, yes, as pertaining to a few of our human failings; but downright smut, never. Our families must be and are protected against the baser qualities of man.

And now this tremendously important young giant, radio, has strode into our field of activity. Fifty millions of people can now hear its voice, and soon the number will be doubled. What a compact unit that power can make of us; what an influence broadcasting will have upon our lives. And, we may add, an influence for good for the rigid censorship imposed upon it by the Federal Commission will regulate it to that end.

Hygiene and health instruction, sermons, farm and livestock information, beautiful music, educational talks, good entertainment, poetry, cooking schools and a myriad of other subjects cannot help but react upon our habits and customs. Perhaps we shall never arrive at the Utopia the idealist dreams of, but a reasonably near approach to it is not far off and it will be arrived at through the influence of this modern miracle, radio.

The very important radio tube has some perculiarities which seem nothing short of miraculous. One of the most interesting things is the speed with which the electrons inside the tube travel. As the filament, or heater, inside the tube increases in temperature, the motion of the electrons gradually increases until they reach a velocity of about 600 miles a second. Then they break away from the filament, or heater, jump right off its surface into the vacuum that exists inside the tube. When this condition is reached through turning on the filament current, the tube is ready to function.

"AHA! CHRISTMAS WILL COME ON THE 25th THIS YEAR!"

We are feeling a heap better today than we did yesterday; we refer to our mind, not health. A press notice informs us that Evangeline Adams, noted broadcasting astrologer, who gets her information from the stars, declares that December is going to come along fine; that "cosmic conditions are more promising than they have been for several months."

Now if she can tell us where we're going to get a few extra dollars to spend for Christmas gifts we'll feel so good that probably we'll bust right out laughing.

We hope this small paragraph will bring a little cheer to a room in the Massachusetts Hospital, where Geraldine Buchanan, night operator at WBZA, has spent three weary, painful weeks.

COMING OUT OF THE ETHER . . . "Bill Schudt's Going to Press," one of radio oldest newspaper features, celebrates its second anniversary and 104th consecutive broadcast over the CBS chain at 6 p. m. tonight. The speaker will be Prof. Charles Phillips Cooper of the Columbia University School of Journalism. His topic vindicates newspapermen; it is "Journalism as an Honored Profession." . . . James Melton, one of radio's favorite soloists, is the Mobiloil guest artist, WEEI at 8:30 tonight and he will sing some of the best known melodies of Franz Lehar . . . Former Governor Smith and Mayor Walker are taking part in the dedication of Minetta Fountain in New York, heard over WNAC at 2 today.

Charity Bazaar to Aid Sallies Hospital

The 17th annual Christmas bazaar of the Evangeline Booth Home and Maternity Hospital of the Salvation Army will be held from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. Thursday and Friday in the hospital building at 202 West Newton st. The bazaar will be in charge of Brigadier Katherine Eckerle, assisted by Field Major Addie Shaffer, Ensign M. Jones and the hospital staff.

Our Port's Future

Rate Adjustment Is Vital

The contest against the differential traffic rates which impose a heavy and unjust burden upon the port of Boston has already demonstrated a New England consciousness and a solidarity of purpose which are bound to collect good results in the future.

Under the leadership of Mayor Curley, the business and industrial interests have come to see the necessity and usefulness of rapidly enlarging the seaborne commerce of the metropolis of New England.

The current issue is simple. The railroads absorb switching, lighterage, wharfage and other charges at New York which the shippers through Boston are themselves required to pay. This condition amounts to nothing more or less than a subsidy in favor of the port of New York. It gives an advantage and a priority to one State over another, which from an economic standpoint is dishonest and from a governmental standpoint is undemocratic.

Until this discrimination is abated or abolished, as it ought to be, by decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the businessmen of New England will have to employ such other means as lie at their disposal to revive the once farflung prestige of New England's maritime greatness.

Mr. Chapman of the United States Lines gave to us but a few days ago a very succinct lesson. He said that out of every $18 in ocean freight rates paid to American shipping lines, $15 is spent in this country for salaries, wages and shipping construction and materials. And out of every $18 paid in freight rates to foreign steamship lines, only $3 is spent in this country, the remaining $15 being spent in foreign countries, usually the home countries of the foreign ships.

He might have added that American goods entrusted to foreign steamships are made to bear also all the handicaps that these lines can conceive in favor of the goods shipped by their own nationals.

In any event, his reminder should be ample for our New England exporters and importers.

The best way and the most patriotic way to build up yourself is first to build up your own country and keep your own domestic market, which, in the case of the United States happens to be the greatest in the world, at its highest possible standard.

Our businessmen will find that when they begin to patronize the American merchant marine, it will soon make enormous strides of progress. And an inevitable result will be a natural, inescapable growth of the port of Boston.

With the American merchant marine patronized with the same patriotic partisanship manifested by the people of foreign countries for their marine, and with the differentials abolished, as they must be some day, the port of Boston will flourish so quickly we would all believe an economic miracle had been kindly visited upon us.

A New War on Pain

Anti-Rheumatism Campaign Planned

Dr. George H. Bigelow, the State Commissioner of Public Health, believing that the State of Massachusetts has done well in combating tuberculosis, cancer and other malignant diseases, suggests that an aggressive campaign now be made against the chronic ailments which cause disability and suffering, if not death, among the people.

To say merely that he is exactly right and to add that he manifests a fine sense of his obligation to administer the public health would be neither inclusive nor conclusive.

It is a fact that Massachusetts has been the foremost State in matters of social welfare legislation and programs. It established the first free tuberculosis clinics and free hospitals, as it did the first cancer clinics and hospital. Its crusades to protect the public against the ravages of the contagious and infectious diseases have been the models subsequently adopted by the other commonwealths throughout the country.

Meanwhile, unsensational ailments like rheumatism, for example, of which there are always 150,000 cases in the State, have gone on collecting their tolls and causing their sufferings, receiving scant attention from the medical authorities. They have provoked, also, an economic loss in productive capacity which a sensible State ought not to endure.

The creation of research agencies and skilled clinics to eradicate these undramatic but harmful afflictions may not command sensational publicity or stimulate avid curiosity, but they do hold the promise of abating pain and distress among human beings. And for that reason, Dr. Bigelow ought to be given about all the authority and encouragement he seeks in the matter.

Listen, World! Bath Tubs

By ELSIE ROBINSON

How About the A. S. O. L.?

Elsie Robinson

BATH TUBS—yes, we have 'em, we Americans. Jade green ones, orchid and peach. Ritzy radios and automobiles. Trick vacuum cleaners and washing machines. Delicatessen food in the frigidaire—everything to make life easy and luxurious. And, even if we haven't these things, we want to have them, expect to have them, stake all we have on getting them.

For they're part of the American standard of living. And we're proud of that standard. We boast about it—make snooty remarks about it to the other nations. We say it's the best and only way for civilized humans to live———

But is it? Is it really wise to put on such a front—and to pay so much for that front?

Banker Eugene R. Black, governor of the Atlanta Federal Reserve Bank, says it isn't! He thinks very little of our boasted A. S. O. L.—and says so. It takes nerve to say that, in the face of our present prosperity ballyhoo.

It takes nerve, at any time, to tell the American people they're not as smart as they think they are. But he told them. Right out straight, to an amazed convention of the Investment Bankers Association he announced that instead of buying now and spending more, we'd better spend less and get out of debt!

And then stay out of debt, by scrapping our extravagant ideas and practicing thrift. Which would certainly put a cramp in our style. But this, according to Banker Black, is what American individuals and American business need.

"I do not agree," says he, "with those who say that in America there must be no retrogression from the present high grade of living . . . I know we have to economize. We have been living in an automobile, electrical refrigeration and radio era and have been sitting in the atmosphere of expensive cigars. We cannot pay our debts and continue in that atmosphere. We cannot have permanent prosperity when there is a load of debt around our necks."

That's getting down to brass tacks. You've been checking up on this depression business yourself—how does it tally with your conclusions?

What made this depression, anyway? The loss of world markets? Or the wrong kind of marketing at home? Buying gobs and gobs of things that we felt we had to have to "keep up with the Joneses" . . . things we couldn't afford to pay for . . . Coming at last to the place where we had to pay for them. Cutting out buying until we did. Is that what has happened in your family—to your stores?

Is that a good thing to have happen? Is it best to have a high standard of living—that will keep us all hustling—and keep many of us in debt? Is a standard like that, in the long run, profitable to a nation? Does it make for happier lives and healthier business? Or is it, in the long run, bad for people and bad for the nation?

Should we live up to the Joneses?

Or should we learn our lesson, can the ritz, and live down to the thriftier standards of the Swedes and the Scots or our little brown brothers across the sea who, somehow, manage to saw an awful lot of wood on a bowl of rice?

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

Babies on the Sidewalks

NEW YORK, Dec. 3—For more than a year I have been watching a sidewalk baby-raising experiment with increasing astonishment. It upset a cartload of hygienic theories and sanitation laws. All the formulas of experts have been thrown into discard.

It is frequently heard New York is no place to rear a child—children need pure air, sunshine and playgrounds. These babies I have watched so ardently are twins. Their parents either work or own a delicatessen on Third avenue. Like Topsy, the youngsters just grow.

Last winter in fair weather and foul the babies were on the pavement in their double carriage. Overhead the serpentine elevated produced the usual clatter. In the press of pedestrianic traffic the infants just cooed and clutched at passersby.

* * *

At times they tried to stuff their tiny toes into their mouths. Not once have I ever seen them cry. They were given chunks of bread to chew and they lay goo-gooing at the drunks, the panhandlers and the tottering viragos of the polyglot world of "Thoid ava-noo."

The dirt and smoke of the city appear to make their cheeks pinker and their bodies fatter and healthier. There was a day last March when it was misting heavily and as I passed the tots were still in their carriage in serene thumb-sucking slumber.

* * *

The other day I passed along again. They are sitting up now and a baby coop supplants the carriage. There they sit playing with a rag doll and a faded paint rubber ball. Cardboard has been placed over the grating to keep their playthings from falling through.

All around is the usual tenement street. Underneath them is a cellar filled with junk. Stray cats rub against them and roaming dogs lick their faces. But the cheerful cherubs are undaunted. And they better be taken indoors soon. For many of us are fighting off a kidnaping urge.

* * *

John Ringling, the circus man, is one of the most astute business men in the land, which accounts largely for the fact, he is one of the richest. Recently a go-getter auto salesman was trying to sell him an automobile. During his high pressure advances he declared:

"Why, Mr. Ringling, that car will do anything, absolutely anything!"

A pause, and the naive Mr. Ringling inquired softly:

"Will it jump sideways?"

* * *

Then there was the Ringling clown wanting a raise in salary. He was getting $60 a week and "Mister John," of course, knew it.

"Mr. Ringling," pleaded the clown, "I sure would like to be with your show next year, but I ought to get $20 a week more."

The clown withdrew, hoping the circus man would not find out the real figures. That ended that.

The Mantelbar Sales Corporation has opened for business on Vanderbilt avenue. It sells a fire place which by a simple operation opens into a complete refreshment bar. Zip! And what'll it be, gents?

The Parisian Rumplemayer tea room branch is in working order on Central Park South. But a Rumplemayer's without E. Berry Wall, his gates-ajar collar mountainous puff tie and chow dog, dropping in every afternoon at 5, is to many just another tea room.

Still there was a merry spark among afternoon Rumplemayer crowds yesterday. A slinkingly thin lady, passing a table occupied by a hefty sister who was making way with a whipped cream concoction, cracked cattily:

"Dedicating another chin, I see!"

Curiosity impelled me to ask the proprietor of a little 8th avenue doughnut shop if he ever ate any of his own doughnuts.

"No, sir," he replied. "I just make them and answer fool questions."

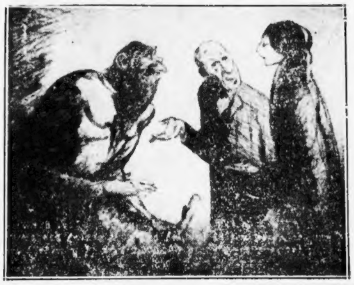
It May Be So

But What of It? We Were All Cave Men Once



"MEET YOUR SUB-CONSCIOUS," SAYS FREUD

You have read some of the nonsense that travels about concerning "psycho-analysis" and "complexes" and "inhibitions" and the rest of the rigamarole that Freudians sell to desirable prospects.

You are told by Dr. Freud and those that follow his trade: "You are not what you think you are. Tell me your dreams and I will tell you what you REALLY are."

Everybody knows that in the persons of our ancestors we were all cave men at one time, and probably cannibals. That doesn't mean that we would gladly eat a little boy at present, or that, like the cave man, we would kill a human enemy and crack open his thigh bone to get the marrow.

According to evolutionists, before we were cave men we went through other lower forms of animal life, away back to tiny creatures that lived in the sea at the very beginning.

We got our five fingers from the five toes of the salamander that lived in the carboniferous era, millions of years ago.

Our ears were once the gills of a fish, from which we descend. And to prove it evolutionists tell you, which is true, that sometimes babies are born with "gill slits" open on the neck, so that when they drink milk it comes out of the slits, just as water comes from a fish's gills.

But what of that? As a deeply religious man has truly remarked, it doesn't make any difference whether Divine Providence chose to create us instantaneously by saying a few words, or to create us through hundreds of millions of years by the slow process of evolution.

A thousand million years, in the sight of the Lord, are only as a second.

The wise man will keep away from Freudian and other foolish theories. Instead of hiring somebody to analyze his psychology and dig around in his mind in search of complexes and inhibitions, he will seek to build up strength through good thought and earnest effort and control his own sub-conscious self by making the living reality the world sees as useful as possible.

We may all have hidden away in the backs of our brains gentlemen and ladies like the individual on the left of this picture. Let us leave them there, not drag them out, fondle and encourage them.

The French writer, Zola, said: "Tout homme a en lui un cochon qui sommeille," which means "Every man has in himself a hog asleep."

In that case, let him SLEEP. Don't hire any psycho-analyst to wake him up and start him grunting.

Take yourself as you are, make the BEST of yourself as you ARE, remembering that will-power, courage and GOOD INTENTION conquer everything.
